BENSON WARNED SIMS AGAINST THE BRITISH

WARNED BY HIS CHIEF, SAYS SIMS

Told by Benson Not to Let British "Pull Wool Over His Eyes"

By International News Service.

Washington, March 22.—Admiral William S. Benson, chairman of the Shipping Board and chief of naval operations during the war, was named by Admiral Sims today as the one who told him "not to let the British pull the wool over his eyes," as he left Washington at the outset of the war to assume charge of naval activities on the other side.

Admiral Sims made this statement before the sub-committee of the Naval Affairs Committee of the State.

Admiral Sims described his interview in the office of Secretary Daniels when he received his orders to go abroad as the United States entered the world war against Germany. He said that in substance Secretary Daniels told him that he was to confer with British naval officials on the other side and report to the department in Washington what was needed over there.

"In his testimony on the awards," said Admiral Sims, "the secretary of the navy said he mentioned the incident of my 'previous indiscretion' at this conference in his office. The secretary's memory fails him. No one reminded me of that incident."

Admiral Sims referred to his "pro-British speeches," for which he was censured some years ago, and said that the "previous indiscretion" mentioned by the Secretary referred to this affair. He was asked to name the man who told him not to "let the British pull the wool over his eyes."

"It was in the office of the Bureau of Navigation," he said. "The man who told me that was Admiral Benson. I received no instructions. The advice was not preceded by any conversation with Admiral Benson, and was not followed by any. He simply made the remark.

"Later, in London, he repeated this

PETERS ATTACKED IN LETTER BEFORE COUNCIL

A letter in which Mayor Peters was attacked for failing to remedy conditions at Long Island was sent to the Boston City Council meeting today. In the letter Miss Dierken, a member of the former board of trustees of the infirmary department, declared the Mayor's statement to the effect that he got rid of the old board because of conditions at the island was erroneous. She stated that the attention of the Mayor was called to conditions soon after his inauguration, and that he promised his support in "cleaning up." When this work was started, however, by the discharge of the superintendent the board was ordered to take him back with full salary, she said.

REVERE MAYOR TO ASK PROBE OF RENT EXTORTION

Mayor Walworth of Revere will tonight ask the City Council to appoint a committee to investigate rent profiteering in that city, as suggested by the Commission on the Necessaries of Life. An appropriation for a similar committee will also be asked by Mayor Brush from the Board of Aldermen of Chelsea.

PROBE WATER AT CAMBRIDGE

State Health Board to Examine Supply Which Made 300 Ill

The State Board of Health has taken over the investigation of the Cambridge water supply following the report that a strange sickness among 300 residents of that city is believed to have resulted from drinking infected water.

Dr. Stanley H. Osborn, State epidemiologist, and Dr. George O'Donnell, State district health officer, have been in Cambridge investigating the persons affected. Several samples of the water were taken and an analysis will be made.

Mayor Quinn and members of the local board of health, in an official proclamation, have warned the people of Cambridge to boil all water before using. No fatalities have been reported, although many of those affected have been made seriously ill.

Cambridge is one of the cities in Greater Boston not supplied through the Metropolitan Water System. According to Xavier H. Goodnough, chief engineer of the system, there has been no complaint of infected water in Boston or in the other communities using the Metropolitan water.

It is believed the Cambridge water supply at Fresh Pond and Hobbs Basin has become polluted by foreign materials, carried by melting snow and ice. Samples of the drinking water have been taken and sent to experts at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for analysis.

One doctor, in a report to the city officials, stated that he has thirty patients suffering from the sickness. The symptoms of the sickness are enteric fever, gland trouble and a weakness which confines the victim to bed.

As a means of combating the present malady a filtering plant may be immediately built.

U. S. TAKES PART OF RUSSIA AND ARMENIA

KILLS WIDOW, IS SUICIDE

Farmer Shoots Woman Who Declined to Be Hurried Into Matrimony

Barre, Vt., March 22.—Hoyt Gallup, 6[illegible], a prosperous farmer residing at Plainfield, shot and killed Mrs. E. M. Fenwick, 51, a widow, of Barre today. Driving to his own home, a few miles away, he shot himself through the heart. Death was almost instantaneous in both cases.

Hoyt was said to have been angry because the woman would not marry him immediately. State's Attorney E. R. Davis was called to the house about 5 o'clock and was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff H. J. S. Slayton. The woman was dead when they arrived.

Gallup had called a neighbor by 'phone asking him to come over immediately.

MORE BRANDY ON CRETIC SEIZED

Custom Officials Dig Out a Dozen Quarts and Are Still on the Hunt

One dozen bottles of brandy were seized today in the quarters of the crew of the White Star liner Cretic, making nearly 200 containers of liquor in all which have been found on this vessel by customs officers.

In the belief that a considerable quantity of smuggled intoxicants is still hidden on the ship, the coal bunkers will be searched. There are more than one thousand hiding places on the liner.

Most of the wine seized Sunday was said to have been taken on board the steamer at Naples, and brought over by steerage passengers. It was in containers ranging in size from a pint bottle to a tin tank, holding six and a half gallons, which was found in the bottom of a trunk.

It was stated that all confiscated liquor would be held at the Custom House as no provision has been made by the law for its disposition.

Boston's Record Good, Says Commissioner Kramer

"There are fewer violations of the national prohibition law in New England than in any section of the country," said John F. Kramer, Federal prohibition commissioner, who arrived in Boston today to confer with the local enforcement officers.

"There is very little illegal selling of liquor in Boston compared with other large cities," he added. "The south is full of illicit stills. What the enforcement officers in Boston must watch closely are efforts such as were made yesterday to smuggle liquor in from European countries."

Jacob was indicted for stealing from the firm while its two heads, Colonel Keville and Colonel Eldridge, were in the service, the former in France and the latter in the State Guard. Jacob had been employed by them to conduct the business while they were serving with the colors.

It was alleged that Jacob's larceny covered a long period. No restitution to the extent of $6,000.

GERMANS SMUGGLED GUNS TO MEXICO

Washington, March 22.— Reports from Paris that large shipments of arms are being made from Germany to Mexico were discredited by officials here today. BONDS AND JEWELRY STOLEN

Thieves Ransack Washington Street Loan Office in Quest of Booty

Liberty Bonds, jewelry and securities amounting to $30,000 were stolen from the office of Henry Van Dam, No. 299 Washington street, by yeggmen who forced a small safe sometime between Saturday night and today.

The thieves, who forced an entrance through the office on the floor above, attempted to open a larger safe without success, and then destroyed all the ledgers and records in the loan office.

USED ROPE LADDER.

The robbery was discovered by Fred Wilmer, manager of the bookbinding establishment of Dudley & Hodge, on the third floor of the building, which is only a stone's throw from the City Hall avenue police station. Mr. Wilmer found the glass had been removed from the door, wood, plaster and remains of a lunch were scattered about the floor, and a yawning chasm showed how an entrance had been effected into the office below.

Utilizing a rope ladder, which was made of new window cord, and which was later left behind, the men lowered

GERMANY ALL BUT A RADICAL LABOR REPUBLIC, SAYS VON WIEGAND

WORKINGMEN HAVE POWER TO VETO ALL MINISTERS

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.
Special Radio Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1920.)

Berlin, March 20 (Saturday afternoon).—After seven days of the most complete general strike in history, the effective weapon of the German working masses in rising and first forcing out the militarist usurpers and then turning on the old (Ebert) government and forcing concessions which make Germany all but a radical labor republic, the general strike was called off at noon today.

However, up to 6 o'clock this evening there were few indications of work being resumed, except that a number of trains began leaving and arriving in Berlin.

The Independent Socialists and Communists are not in accord with the agreement reached at 7:22 o'clock this morning after an all-night session between representatives of the Social Democrats and Radical leaders.

CONCESSIONS ARE DEMANDED.

The Independents and Communists scattered pamphlets and put up posters ordering their men to remain on strike.

At 8 o'clock the "Botriebsrate," or Workingmen's Councils, began holding meetings all over the city to discuss the question whether or not to ratify the agreement. Here are the main concessions made by the spokesmen of the Social Democrats on behalf of the Ebert government, concessions which must be ratified by that government:

1—Organized labor is given what is tantamount to the power of vetoing all ministers. No ministers are to be named that are objectionable to them. To illustrate: The ministry of finance has more than 200,000 employes. Should the finance minister displease these employes, they, through the medium of the central labor body, shall have the power to remove him.

MUST PUNISH KAPP.

2—Severe punishment of Dr. Wolfgang Kapp, General Baron von Luettwitz, and all their military and civil associates in the coup of a week ago yesterday.

3—A thorough housecleaning of all governmental and civil service departments, including especially those of the ministries of post, railways, telegraphs and telephones, and the removal therefrom of all non-Republican elements.

4—Reinstatement of all persons dismissed for political reasons.

5—New workingmen's and welfare laws.

6—Immediate convening of a commission to devise ways and means for socialization and nationalization. And immediate nationalization of all industries "ripe for it," such as mines, electric power companies, etc.

7—Rigorous seizure of all concealed foodstuffs.

8—Severe measures against profiteers.

REORGANIZATION OF ARMY.

Q—Reorganization or creation of all military formations and units by the Republican officers' league.

The ninth is one of the most important concessions and could be interpreted as the demobilization of the National Guard and substitution therefor of a new force, headed by a league of Radical officers who would be supreme.

"Some of the concessions which had to be made will seem terrifying at the first reading," remarked a member of the government to me. "It all depends on the interpretation."

Last night (Friday) was the quietest since Captain Erhardt made his spectacular entrance through the Brandenburg Gate last Saturday morning.

A bitterly cold rain came like an icepack to Berlin's delirious brain. This chill upon the spirit of revolt was more effective in clearing the streets than did the machine guns and armored cars.

NO NEWSPAPERS YET.

The barricades in front of the Adlon have been let down. No newspapers have appeared yet. The dizzy whirl of conflicting reports of alleged happenings, not only outside but inside the city, continues.

Bicycles are still the chief means of locomotion. The Elevated has had to suspend again because radicals insisted on shooting into the cars.

The number of dead throughout Germany since last Saturday is now placed at 3,000 by the Ministry of Defence.

A special car with Americans, especially women, is scheduled to leave tonight for Cologne and Coblenz, in charge of an American officer attached to the United States force of occupation on the Rhine.

remark. Six months later, in Paris, he made the same statement. I had completely forgotten these statements, but was reminded of them by an aide. I did not mean to go into personalities, but I attributed Admiral Benson's remark to personal prejudice against the British."

Admiral Sims said that Admiral Benson is known to be prejudiced against the British, and said that he attributed his advice to this attitude and thought that there was nothing personal in it.

Sims pointed out that he owed his position as commander of the naval forces on the other side to Admiral Benson, and that the latter had brought down criticism on himself by appointing Admiral Sims over the heads of other officers.

PROPAGANDA DENOUNCED.

Letters from Admiral Sims' personal file were denounced as "British propaganda" by Senator Pittman of Nevada.

Two letters marked as coming from "Admiral Sims' personal file" were read. One of them mentioned the strong British pressure on American officials to have our army broken up and mixed with British units until they were experienced. The letter urged this plan. The letter was written in January, 1918.

Another letter, written in November, 1917, had recommended that our new troops be put in ship yards as the most effective method of employing them.

"Now, whether you wrote them or not," Senator Pittman said to Sims, "this is simply British propaganda against the establishment of separate American units."

"I absolutely object to calling that propaganda," Sims interrupted, heatedly. "That is simply plain, sound military sense, and is what was done eventually by General Pershing."

Sims denied any personal connection with the letters, but said he approved of the plan. He said that Pershing himself was in favor of the plan at the time.

It was not brought out at the hearing, but in General Pershing's report on the war mention is made of this same plan and of the strong policy of the American command to maintain a separate army as far as possible.

PITCHED BATTLE IN BERLIN

RESUME GENERAL STRIKE.

The labor unions have decided to resume the general strike to enforce their political demands upon the government.

Leaders of the Majority and Independent Socialists conferred on the strike situation, but were unable to reach an agreement.

The big question now is, "Will the Laborites follow the extremist or moderate Socialists?"

The Independent Socialists urge a continuation of the strike until a Communist republic is established. The water works has been closed. There is no coal. The poorer classes are in a bitter frame of mind. They have joined in the cry for a Communist government.

President Ebert and Minister of Defence Noske have returned from Stuttgart.

Fighting was in progress all day between organized bands of armed Reds and Reichswehr (government military police), around Moabit penitentiary.

Machine guns and minenwerfers were used by both sides, and the rolling volleys could be heard in this city.

Moabit prison is on the outskirts of Berlin and a number of political prisoners are confined there.

The special train which was secured to take the Americans from Berlin was unable to proceed by way of Cologne because of fighting between the Spartacists and government troops along the railway line in the Ruhr district. Arrangements were made for the train to travel over the Magdeburg-Giessen line.

It is regarded as significant here that the Spartacans were able to defeat the crack government troops in Westphalia. Two regiments of government troops which were forced to retreat fought their way through Oberhausen and Duisburg to the West. One regiment lost ten officers killed and the other lost three officers.

Machine guns which could not be taken along were destroyed by the soldiers. Others fell into the hands of the Communists.

Warfare Impends in the Ruhr District

Paris, March 22.—Warfare on a big scale is threatened in the Ruhr district of Germany, between the Spartacists and German government troops.

The French government is deeply worried over the situation and may seek intervention by French, British and Belgian troops. Two German officers today were dashing to Paris by motor car, bringing the latest information as to conditions in the danger spot.

Forty thousand Spartacist troops, supported with flame throwers and "seventy-fives" are massed in the coal fields of Ruhr and the industrial belt, according to information reaching the foreign office.

President Ebert is threatening to open an offensive campaign against the Ruhr Spartacists tomorrow, surrounding their army with loyal troops.

General von Berfeldt is reported in command of the Spartacists. The Spartacists are well armed and demonstrated their administrative ability by taking over the whole Ruhr district from the government authorities.

It was understood that the French government would not take any formal action until the two German officers enroute here with first hand information made their report.

Whatever the decision is, it is understood that France will not act independently but will expect the cooperation of both England and Belgium. Most of the German coal secured by France under the treaty terms comes from the Ruhr mines.

Machine Guns Fill Streets of Berlin

By International News Service.

London, March 22.—The strike situation at Berlin is improving, but the government is taking strong military precautions and the streets are filled with barricades and machine guns, according to the following Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Berlin today:

"President Ebert and his ministers held a long conference with the Majority Socialists, the trade union leaders and independent Socialists on Sunday.

"The strike situation is improving.

"The National Assembly has been summoned to meet on Wednesday.

"Strong military precautions are being taken. The streets are being filled with barricades and machine guns are posted everywhere.

CHARGED WITH STABBING SON-IN-LAW IN FIGHT

Battista Crosti, sixty, was arrested today charged with assault with a dangerous weapon upon his son-in-law, Claude Giarriari, of No. 99 Revere street, Revere, who is in a serious condition at the Massachusetts General Hospital from knife wounds about the face and neck. In court the case was continued until Thursday and Crosti held in $500 bail. The assault took place in the apartment which the father and mother-in-law occupy with Crosti, his wife, and five children early today. It is said to have followed a quarrel between the two men.

Wrecked Office After Robbery of Safe

ered themselves into the Van Dam office, in which were two safes. The larger of these was located near the windows on the Washington street side of the office, with the smaller a short distance away.

In the small safe was a tin box containing the jewelry and securities, which up to a short time ago was deposited each night in the vaults of a nearby bank. This custom was discontinued when the bank got into difficulties and was closed.

GOT $500 IN CASH.

The yeggmen, working leisurely, ripped off the doors of the safe by means of the "can opener" method, and took the box containing Liberty bonds valued at $7,000, securities worth more than $20,000 and about $500 in cash.

After cleaning out the small safe, the thieves attempted to open the bigger one, but without success. The police believe that the men, angered at their failure, then destroyed the office records so that the firm would have no hold on those to whom they loaned money.

The loot was packed into bags and hauled to the floor above, where they apparently enjoyed a lunch, as coffee bottles and crusts of bread were found later. They then opened a window on a fire escape in the rear of the building, and escaped into Province court.

FINGER PRINTS ON SAFE.

The police believe the men to be professionals owing to the fact that a burglar alarm in the Van Dam office was not disturbed. It is thought the men became careless, however, for although a pair of cheap cotton gloves was left in the book bindery the police declared they found well defined finger prints on one of the safes.

It was reported that an automobile was seen driving up and down Washington street, near School street, early Sunday, at which time it is thought the yeggs were making a survey of the scene preparatory to obtaining an entrance. The police believe that one of the band was hidden in the building and that he opened the lower door for the others.

Washington, March 22.—A commission, including leaders in practically every line of American business and professional effort, will visit Japan next month to promote "better mutual understanding," it was announced today. The party will be headed by Frank A. Vanderlip, financier and former president of the National City Bank.

The commission will leave Seattle April 10 and will spend three weeks in Japan, as guests of the Japanese Welcome Association, an organization of financiers and business men.

The party will include Mr. Vanderlip, Henry W. Taft, noted international lawyer, New York; George Eastman, manufacturer, of Rochester, N. Y.; Lyman J. Gage, former Secretary of the Treasury, New York; Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance Company; Lewis E. E. Benedict of the National City Bank.

In announcing the trip, Mr. Vanderlip's office declared there was no "significance in the visit." Denial was made of an intent to establish an Anglo-Japanese banking alliance. "The visit is purely informal and unofficial and is made at the request of the Japanese association," commented Mr. Benedict.

MRS. RANDALL DRIVEN TO DESPAIR BY BLEYER'S GROWING COOLNESS

FEARS END OF ROMANCE NEAR; THEN PEACEFUL DEATH

Chicago, March 22.—Out of the bitter sweet of their "affair" Ruth Randall distills one thought that continually haunts her and makes it difficult to go on—that underneath the affection shown her by Captain Clifford Bleyer he feels the inevitable "loathing that can never be overcomd for the woman who has slipped."

Thus she confesses in her diary that no matter what happiness she has had it isn't worth the price she has paid. Again she confesses to a desire to take her life that she may be rid of the pain caused by doubt of his love and his growing periods of coolness. At this stage of her diary she is in her 29th year.

I met Petroff for dinner at Perfecto, and jokingly suggested going to St. Louis with him. Imagine me letting my Cliff go to meet that old wifrua. I did it because he always has something he must attend to and leaves me. It was the same thing as punishing a child.

FEARS END OF ROMANCE NEAR.

Cliff came over while I was out. He had been here and cut pages out of my little kitten books and burned his photograph. Oh, what a time! He left after half an hour of abuse, and then returned shortly and was here all night, drinking, abusing me and crying. I did not think my Cliff cared so much. He says he will see me once a week or so. I protested my innocence, but he does not believe me and I can hardly blame him. My Cliff, my poor Cliff.

April 8.—Cliff here last night and Sunday. With me a great deal, bless his heart. He seems very miserable and I wish I could help him. He is very good and loves me a lot more than he has for so long.

April 10. — Cliff and I are dining home every night. He and Andree have fallen out again. Last night he raged for hours and hours. It seemed like a century to me. He tortured me as a cat does a mouse.

He would say something cruel and then laugh back in his chair and watch me through half-closed eyes. Oh, the unutterable agony I went through! I felt as though a little piece of my body was being cut off each minute and held up for me to see.

When finally he stopped at 2 o'clock this morning I fell asleep immediately through pure exhaustion. I felt like a condemned person. He has a presentiment that the end is near, and I—I see only death, or life without my Cliff, ahead of me. So many things are preying on my mind, destroying my peace, killing me slowly.

TWO WEEKS OF HAPPINESS.

April 14—Cliff and I get along without one cross word. I thank God for my wonderful happiness, for which I have longed and waited. Cliff comes home sober every night for dinner. God bless him.

April 20—All the happiness of the past two weeks. Cliff coming home to me every night for dinner. He is sober and so sweet and kind, except cross except about the St. Louis affair. What I would not give to be able to look at my Cliff and say I am happy. I have been able to that there has been no other man! I am a beast. I loathe myself. God help me to do right and be truthful.

I have lied so much. I am tired, tired of it all. And when I tell Cliff is mine, as I do more and more than ever, as he is here all the time, I cannot continue to lie. He is the respect him too much. He is mine and everything to me and I pray God that I may never have to lie to him be faithful and devoted love and service.

May 28—The past few nights Cliff had come home with a cocktail breath. He is sober and pleasant and what more can I want? Last night I wrote story "Traveler" and went to Advertising Men's Luncheon. Afterward brought two lovely cups and two little Jap bowls.

June 1—Sunday, 5 p. m. Warm, beautiful day. Thursday, as Cliff and I were having dinner here the phone rang. Thinking it was for him, as he had just put in a long distance call to Milwaukee, Cliff answered the ring. It was Joe Tahney, and he asked for "Ruth." Cliff was angry and didn't believe I had not seen him for a year.

Before he left for Milwaukee, Cliff kissed me for the first time since the phone call. Said he didn't know when he'd be back. I typed letters all day and at 5:45 went to Powell's, up at 6 and went to Orchestra Hall. Left at 9:30 and walked to Randall's.

June 2—Cliff has just left to go to the club for mail. Cliff never loves me, and I am starving.

Last night he said I might as well not be straight, because I got no results. He doesn't believe me.

CLIFF DOUBTS.

He never has cared much. I know, but now he doesn't cover. He is with me simply because I do everything for him. He is weak and likes I had a woman do washing and cleaning, and he says it costs too much, so it is up to me again. I am really not strong enough. I just want to die and to rest, rest forever in peace.

Friday night Cliff brought orchids and tube roses.

June 11—Wednesday, 9:30 a. m.—Our aerial mail carrier just passed over the house. Think of it. Aerial mail service. Some world.

My Cliff just left, so late. Night before last he said he'd leave unless I told him the truth about Joe's phone call of two weeks ago. I have, I have, but he doesn't believe. He doesn't believe I am doing everything I can for Cliff. Even making silk H. V. D's. I hope those who see them think they are well made.

June 12—Two years ago today I first met my Cliff. He is in Milwaukee for the day. He is such a good boy now, all the time.

June 25 (Wednesday)—Monday was the 23d. It was just two years ago that Cliff and I first went to Gino's and had our first party. We celebrated again with Jaffe and Surplus, friends of Cliff's. The table was decorated with flowers. Cliff stayed sober and we had a delightful, happy time, except that I would rather be alone with him.

Last night (Tuesday) he brought George Collins, his boss, out.

I had a poor supper and was very tired. Cliff got a little drunk and so silly. The four of us went to Tearney's, Dorchester Inn and Dave Collins'.

CLIFF STRIKES HIM.

While George was dancing I was telling him not to drink with his boss.

He pushed me in the face and knocked me over and ran out.

June 26.—Went to see mother yesterday. When I got here at 5:20 Cliff was here. Had been here an hour. He was sitting in the window with a gun beside him. Pulled me over his lap and said he'd been cross and that he was sorry.

July 11.—I have been reading all the foolish things I have written for the past two years about Cliff.

The book is filled with moans. I have written so many times that I cried because Cliff did not kiss me good night. I don't cry now.

Doesn't it show that I care less, or what? It hurts me to drop into the rut of regular married people who show very little enthusiasm or happiness when they meet at night after having been separated the day.

If I did not run and jump and kiss Cliff when he comes home for dinner he would probably make a move toward me. On the surface everything is smooth.

But in those few moments when he is so kind and tender I live my whole life and try to forget the other lives or put them away from my mind when he is contemptuous of my sex and vice in particular.

INEVITABLE LOATHING.

Underneath his sweetness he feels that loathing that can never be overcome for the woman who has slipped —no matter when. The woman has only a heartache and the realization that the single standard rules. What can only a mistress offer?

August 8—Cliff starts in business for himself next month. I am so glad, and expect great things to be done by my Cliff. Collins was here for dinner the other night. He was charmingly polite and Cliff was very good.

August 26.—Cliff is working hard, too hard. Said the other night he cannot go along with me this way for the rest of his life, and that as Paulette gets older he will spend more and more time with her, so I will be alone more and have less time to see other people, and that he will probably certainly end with some one and that will end it between us. He insists that I learn to be a copy writer. Did all day Saturday, in making their way about, found that the river was up.

September 2. — Cliff's office opens today in full force with stenos and all. He said last night there would be no more Kitten visits.

I have been there several times to meet him or wait for him or to take him things. Don gave him some pieces of steel, which he whittled for, rowed money, but issued Don no stock of the C. M. Company. Don wants Cliff to work in the office from 8 to 5, and Cliff won't have it. Said he'd probably be fired. Spread with Don.

September 7. That he has used him as much as he can.

HIS CATSPAW.

The shame of speaking so of a friend of twenty-five years' standing. I suppose I am still a little woeful, at I, too, would have been thrust aside. The sooner the "ill wind" blows the better for me.

I am studying the advertising which Cliff brought home and I hope to please him by being successful in my poor attempts. If I were ever happy with Cliff and felt secure in all that I have and know I have, I feel I could do great things.

I pray I may be able to win it. I cannot hold Cliff except by talking business. Sunday, have dinner with me, he was restless and wanted Edna and Al to come over. They did not come, so I fed the Beethoven donata he brought home so long ago and he was pleased.

I must rise to his plane.

I must be cold, cruel, calculating, and I must not rest. I must have success for myself. Truly I have much to do to be successful in his eyes.

(September 7, Tuesday morning)—Cliff goes to Evanston to help pack the family off to Pond du Lac. They go tomorrow. Monday night he bought an electric for his horse. Goes to sleep every night without kissing me.

Cliff said he would come to see me two or three times a week in the new flat. There may be no new flat.

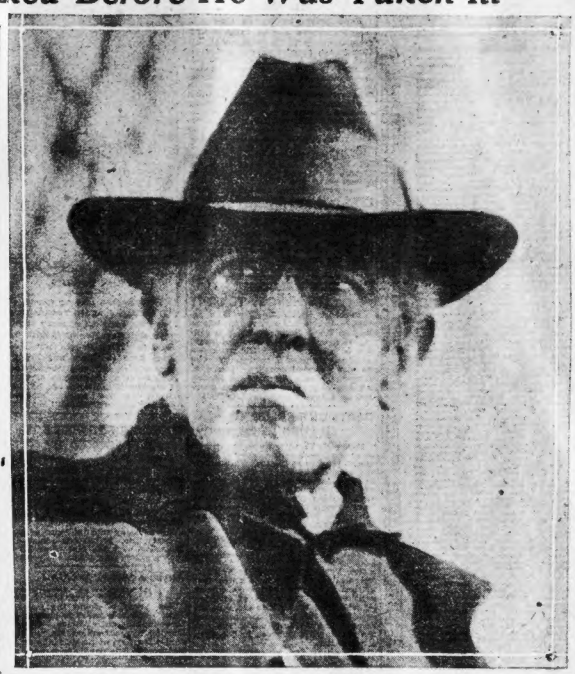
(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

Women Plan Post Auxiliary

Wives, mothers and sisters of Brookline service men will meet in the Brookline Town Hall tonight to inaugurate an auxiliary to Post No. 11 of the American Legion. Mrs. John Lowell will preside.

President Wilson as He Appears Today and as He Looked Before He Was Taken Ill

The above photograph shows the President as he appeared as he started West on his campaign in behalf of the League of Nations. His speechmaking trip was cut short by illness and he was hurried to Washington. Photograph by International.



How President Wilson has aged during his recent illness is strikingly illustrated in the above photograph, the first he has posed for since he was compelled to abandon his trip through the West. The President's usual smile is missing. The face is drawn and white, and eloquent in suffering, both mental and physical. Intimates declare that he has undergone tortures because of his enforced inactivity while the League of Nations was being killed and other pet projects undermined. The President posed for the photograph while on one of the recent automobile rides undertaken to build up his health again. Copyright by International.

TWO PROBES AT PARKER HILL

Public Health Service and Legion Are Getting Evidence From Men at Hospital

Two investigations of Parker Hill hospital, where war veterans are alleged to have suffered from neglect and abuse, were under way today. One was conducted by Colonel William A. Terrberry of Washington, of the inspector-general's department of the public health service, and the other by a committee of the American Legion.

On the legion committee were Colonel William J. Keville, Major H. W. Goodall and Captain Thomas D. Lavelle.

Colonel Terrberry was unaccompanied as he questioned the patients. Each was informed that his statements would be considered confidential and was assured that any complaints would not cause discrimination from the hospital management.

When Colonel Terrberry had finished his examination of each patient the American Legion committee then took the patient in charge.

The legion gave close attention to conditions in the tuberculosis ward, where George H. Wilson, State organizer of the legion, said the most complaints were heard. Wilson in his report to the State executive committee attributed most of the trouble to Captain Davis, executive officer at the hospital.

The investigation of Colonel Terrberry is expected to last about a week, but the legion probably will be finished in a shorter time. There are 490 patients in the hospital, sixty of whom are members of the legion.

Colonel Terrberry today said he would be in the office of Major H. C. Sprague, commanding officer of the hospital, at 9:30 a. m. daily, to hear all complaints.

TO WAR ON 'BIG FOUR' GROUP

Reported Dean Homer Albers Has Been Engaged to Lead in Fight

Homer Albers, dean of the Boston University Law School and an expert on election laws, has been retained to make a fight against the printing of the names of the Big Four unpledged candidates for the Republican National Convention, according to reports in political circles today.

Dean Albers refused to confirm or deny the report. The time for filing protests with the Secretary of State will expire Friday. Senator Lodge, former senator Crane, speaker Gillett and Edward A. Thurston, former chairman of the Republican State Committee, are the Big Four unpledged group whose right to run as a group will be challenged by Dean Albers, according to the report.

Four other candidates for the Republican convention are running as individuals. They are: former Governor McCall, former Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham, Congressman Fuller and Russell A. Wood of Cambridge. Thomas W. Lawson has announced his candidacy, but his papers have not appeared at the State House.

It is reported that Charles S. Baxter will manage the McCall and Frothingham campaigns. It is not unsooner or later would make some sort of contest against the grouping of names.

WAR NURSE NEW HEAD OF LYNN HOSPITAL

Miss Vera A. Allan, widely known war nurse, has been appointed superintendent of the Lynn Hospital by the board of trustees to succeed Dr. Hilda A. Simon.

Miss Allan was a member of the first Harvard medical unit which sailed for Europe under the command of Dr. Hugh Cabot in 1916.

U. S. Will Expose Your Secretive Husband

Washington, March 22.—And now the United States government has taken issue with Senor Vincente Blasco Ibanez concerning the eternal feminine.

The distinguished Spanish author, it will be recalled, urged "caveman" treatment of the American woman and his maxims, translated into the vernacular, are somewhat freely, as follows:

1—Marry 'em young.

2—Treat 'em rough.

3—Tell 'em nothing.

The weekly bulletin of the Department of Agriculture, which is a sort of a Koran of the American housewife, appears with the advice that American husbands should tell their wives everything; and, if a husband should be unable to answer one of the questions of his better half, the bulletin says that the query be referred to it.

"What do women want to know? asks the bulletin lucidly.

"We may not know," it confesses, "the answers to all questions asked of us, but we are sure to find sources of information, both State and Federal, and can obtain the knowledge from an authority on the subject."

MILLS CLOSED BY FLOODS

Plant at Dedham Shut Down by Water as Rivers Throughout State Go Over Banks

Mills closed, cellars full of water, and reports of rivers still rising, featured the flood situation throughout Massachusetts today.

Although the probability of serious damage and possible loss of life was removed, the Charles River at South Natick was said to be creeping still farther beyond its banks.

Residents, who were forced to take to boats on Saturday, in making their way about, found that the river was up which filled the cellars had risen to the level of the kitchens in some places.

The Dedham Finishing Company's mill on Maverick street, Dedham, the centre of the flooded district, was closed, putting 100 employes out of work. The water flowed over the top of the dam and poured into the cellar of the mill, all but swamping the fire boxes and preventing building fires.

The dam and the bride on Maverick street were both holding out. They had been strengthened and restrengthened by piling bags filled with soft coal and rocks against the buttresses.

Whist Party in Roxbury

To raise funds for St. Patrick's table at the diocesan bazaar to be held in Symphony Hall next month the Mount Pleasant Women's Club will hold a whist party in the High School of Practical Arts, Greenville street, Roxbury, Thursday evening. Mrs. William F. Connell heads the committee of arrangements.

Rothschild in Rags, Fights Extravagance

Paris, March 22.—A spectacular lesson was given to extravagant society women by Maurice Rothschild, richest banker in Europe; Edmond Blanc, the Monte Carlo roulette king, and Andre Fouquieres, noted as a twentieth century Beau Brummel.

This trio astonished the fashionable throng that overflowed the Auteuil paddock on the occasion of the Spring Grand Prix by appearing in old, unpressed suits, with trousers frayed at the bottoms.

Never before had such a striking contrast been witnessed among the fashionable circles assembled at the season's first smart meeting, where money apparently was no object, gambling reaching undreamed of proportions and the extravagance in dress equalling that of Babylon's palmy days.

EXTRAVAGANCE RIDICULED.

Frederick Francois Marsal, Minister of Finance and reputed to be one of the soundest financiers in France, is said to be encouraging the campaign opened by the noted trio as a means of killing by ridicule the extreme extravagance which has been a feature of the post-war era.

Having personally lectured society matrons on the necessity of their ceasing to spend fabulous amounts on gowns which are generally discarded after a week or so, M. Marsal, it is said, is now starting a secret society among the more sensible leaders of fashion with the purpose of making the wearing of old apparel a sign of good taste and good breeding.

The Marquis de Gaunay is said to be the leader of the women's section of this novel secret society, and M. Rothschild the leader of the men's section.

The decision to adopt direct methods to stamp out extravagance and gambling was arrived at when it became known that many fashionable women had been placed in an extremely precarious situation through heavy losses in the stock market, as a result of the temporary slump due to the German revolution.

COSTLY PEARLS AS BEADS.

The new of silk stockings, which average $100 a pair; the thirst for sequin-lash backed evening gowns, and the mad desire for flimsy tango costumes has driven women into the stock market with disastrous results.

The display of pearls at Auteuil surpassed anything seen this year and caused observers to wonder where such wealth is coming from. Some women paraded about the enclosure wearing strings of pearls worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, hanging from their pearl necklaces in accordance with the latest fad.

Real pearls taking the place of beads or stones as handbag ornaments are the latest thing. Each pearl costs in the neighborhood of $10,000.

As a protest against the edict barring displays of silk hosiery, several girls appeared stockingless, with the evident purpose of showing that morality is bound to lose by the enforcement of such a law. The richness of their gowns and the wealth of the jewel display afforded an awkward paradox, however.

Bare arms, bare backs, bare legs and clinging dress materials, emphasizing the outlines of the figure, continue to be the principal features of the present fashions, which encourage anything that is rich enough or scanty enough to recall or surpass the gay days of the Directorate and the Empress Josephine.

SINN FEIN FEAR REPRISALS

Attempts to Take Lives of Two Aldermen Follow Slaying of MacCurtain

London, March 22.—Assassination of Thomas MacCurtain, Lord Mayor of Cork, and attempts at the lives of two aldermen are believed by Sinn Fein officials to mark the opening of a political vendetta by a gang of Anglican desperadoes.

The Sunday Pictorial states the belief is widespread in Ireland that this gang is composed of men who have taken an oath to avenge the outrages committed by Sinn Fein members and who are determined to exact an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

The Sunday Express supports this view, pointing out that early in March four armed men raided the Cork Hospital, robbed the nurses, all ardent Sinn Feiners, of money, watches and jewels, and then retreated, after compelling the women to sing "God Save the King."

The slaying of MacCurtain, however, has strengthened the rebel movement considerably. The government, expecting the indignation of the populace to take violent form, is strengthening Cork's garrison and taking other precautions.

Notices Denouncing Murder Of Lord Mayor Torn Down

Cork, Ireland, March 22—Notices on the doors of the City Hall, denouncing the assassination of Lord Mayor Thomas MacCurtain, a Sinn Feiner, on Saturday morning, were torn down during the night. The notices read:

"Closed owing to the murder of Thomas MacCurtain, the first Republican Lord Mayor, by hired assassins of the British government."

All amusements and places of business were ordered closed until after the funeral mass and procession to the cemetery.

The inquisition has begun but no new evidence has developed. The MacCurtain clan says that there is sufficient evidence to bring the crime home to the guilty. Bullets found in the house were of an unmistakable pattern and the family attorney, Patrick Lynch, former opponent of President De Valera, promises to have an important statement to make when the inquest is resumed Tuesday.

CLERK HELD IN $2,500 ON 4 LARCENY COUNTS

Hugh L. Morrison of Everett, a clerk at Smith's Market, Washington street, Dedham, was held in $2,500 bonds for the Grand Jury by Judge Sanborn in the Dedham District Court today on four counts of larceny in sums ranging from $6 cash to $1.10. Morrison pleaded guilty.

SENATOR FRANCE FOR NEW PARTY

Would Organize Republican Liberals to Restore "Free Popular Government"

By International News Service.

Washington, March 22.—Organization of a new party of Republican liberals "to bring nearer to perfection the performance of the present functions of government," was announced today by Senator France of Maryland, in a speech in the Senate.

He declared the most important national problem at this time is the "restoration of free, popular government" to the people as a full realization of their liberties."

He charged the presence of "reactionary Bourbonism" at the helm of both of the great parties and that this leadership has prevailed "regardless of the constitutional guarantees of the preservation during the war of, the inherent natural rights and personal liberties of the people."

"A GRAVE CRISIS."

"We face a grave national crisis," he declared.

"On our decision concerning the treaty, and by our next national election, we shall determine whether we go back recklessly on our present course to the unknown and uncontemplated perils of a continued disregard for principles, for the constitution, and for laws.

"We will decide whether we shall adopt political opportunism as a permanent policy, whether we shall accept the unworthy thought that the end justifies the means, or go back to the reasonableness and confidence in the great principles of liberty of this nation."

ATTACKS "DRY" LAW.

The prohibition amendment was attacked by Senator France as having been passed under war stress and when thousands of men were in camps.

"If the Supreme Court upholds this method of procedure, then all men, regardless of how they feel upon the question of national prohibition, should be willing to advocate the repeal of the eighteenth amendment in order that constitutional times the people and their legislators should have an opportunity of determining for themselves, freed from all coercion, compulsion and repression, this most important question.

Senator France described the "growing sentiment" of Republican liberalism in the United States and said that the present leadership of the party is not making a just estimate of its strength.

Fined for Liquor Sale

Luigi Foti, proprietor of a saloon on Maverick street, East Boston, was fined $50 in the East Boston Court today for selling half a pint of whiskey to Patrolman McNabb.

Fines Pile Up on This Auto Truck Driver

A series of fines were imposed on an offending chauffeur by Judge Joseph R. Churchill in the Dorchester Court today when Harry Klayman of No. 37 Union street, Cambridge, paid four fines, totalling $40.

Klayman drives a large auto truck for a Cambridge firm. On March 13 his truck got stuck in the Blue Hill avenue reservation and tied up traffic for an hour and a half. Today he was fined $20 for encroaching on the reservation, $10 for operating to display a white light; $5 for lack of a rear light, and $5 for not being in court when his case was called today.

DE VALERA DAY ADDS IMPETUS TO IRISH BOND DRIVE

Subscriptions for Irish bond certificates continue to pour into the office of the American Commission on Irish Independence. Committees in the western part of the State report they are meeting with great success in disposing of the bonds. Medford and other cities close to Boston show remarkable gains in the amount of certificates sold. The drive is for $1,000,000 throughout the State. Boston's share of that amount is $500,000, which, it is stated, is almost subscribed.

Additional impetus was given to the drive today because it is known as "President Eamon de Valera Day" and admirers bought a bond so as to have the American Commission on Irish Independence stamp the noted leader's name on their certificate. It was figured that approximately $5,000 worth of bonds were sold in Boston because of this fact. Tomorrow will be known as the "Deathless Marthewicz Day" and in honor it is hoped that many women will buy bonds.

HUB FOOD PRICES SHOW INCREASE

Decrease, General in U. S., Is Not Apparent in Eastern Cities

Food prices in Boston showed a slight increase during the month from January 15 to February 15, although the greater part of the country showed a slight decrease, according to the report issued by the Department of Labor. The increase in Boston for twenty-two of the main food articles was 1½ per cent., while the general decrease for the whole country amounted to 3⅝ per cent.

Portland, Me., according to the report, suffered the most from profiteering, with an increase of 3 per cent.

Nearly all the Eastern cities were hit by slight increases, but in the Middle West and West decreases in prices were the rule.

The reports show that in the seven years since 1913, twelve of the chief articles of food increased 100 per cent. or more. Among these increases are: pork and ham, 105 per cent.; lard, 110 per cent.; lamb, 111 per cent.; rice, 113 per cent.; eggs, 119 per cent.; flour, 145 per cent.; storage eggs, 153 per cent.; potatoes, 275 per cent. and sugar, 242 per cent.

THE STORE OF PROGRESS

The Public Be Served!

IN the recent storm-swept weeks—when trains were stalled—when roads were blocked—and King Blizzard held sway—the thousands of users of Hood's Milk reached out to their stoops and found waiting for them—their daily milk supply.

Through stinging sleet and blustering wind—through lonesome streets of unbroken road—through growing snowdrifts to the sleeping homes—fighting the elements every inch of the way—hundreds of loyal Hood route-salesmen labored with bottles of clean, pure, safe Milk and Cream.

There was not a single day—even at the height of the storms—that at least nine-tenths of the customers were not served and on only a few days were the users of Hood's Milk inconvenienced at all.

H. P. Hood & Sons endeavors to give the public exactly what it wants—sure and prompt delivery and a Clean, Pure, Safe Milk.

The public must be served. This responsibility must be felt by every Hood employee from the President to the office-boy.

Only by the volume of its business—its vast organization of human and mechanical equipment—its unlimited sources of supply—was the company enabled to attain this record during those trying times.

We are proud to add this "Standard of Service" to what is already a record without equal—"In nearly three-quarters of a century of continuous service not a case of disease has been traced to Hood's Milk."

Cadomene the "Miracle Medicine"

Many People Have Written of the Seeming "Miracles" Performed by Cadomene Tablets

They Are Only Recommended for Worn-Out, Impoverished, Nervous People, But—

People have testified that they have been relieved of rheumatism, headaches, stomach disorders, pains of neuralgia, etc., through the use of this great medicine-tonic, Cadomene Tablets. It only means that the Cadomene has helped to build up the strength of all organs and then nature has a chance to bring the cure. Therefore, if you are tired, sluggish, and your feet and hands are cold and clammy, and nervousness overwhelms you by sleeplessness, irritable temper, and your heart flutters while dizziness and trembling seize you at times, you may ward off serious consequences and become full of vigor, red blood and health for every vital organ of your body. Mr. J. W. Biggs of R. R. No. 3, Fort Worth, Tex., writes: "I am using Cadomene Tablets and find them to be good in every way for an old man of 60." F. W. Barbeau, 1327 Inca street, Denver, Colo., writes: "I have taken one package of Cadomene and it has put me on my feet and I feel fine."

Cadomene builds up nerves and bodily vigor. All druggists.—Advertisement.

For Freckled, Rough or Muddy Complexions

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which delicate skins are subject after exposure to wind or sun, often appearing in early spring, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, sightishly beautiful face.—Advertisement.

Williams to Consider Plan to Establish Government Liquor Dispensaries

By International News Service.

Washington, March 22.—The proposal to establish government liquor dispensaries, where whiskey and wine may be legally bought under certain restrictions, will be considered by William M. Williams at the outset of his administration as internal revenue commissioner, which begins April 1. Williams will be urged to make definite recommendations to Congress for amendment of the Volstead law, to allow establishment of dispensaries, under government supervision.

Daniel C. Roper, who retires from the post within a few days, probably will not decide the issue, but will leave it to his successor.

Unexpected support of the plan has come from numerous "dry" leaders. The prohibitionists believe the government dispensary idea may help to check opposition to the present national law.

"Dry" leaders are particularly disappointed over the failure of exemptions relating to the legal procurement of liquor for medical use. Internal revenue bureau records show doctors and druggists generally have not availed themselves of permit privileges, because of the duties imposed in bookkeeping and making returns.

YOUNG ROCKEFELLER TO SPEAK HERE APRIL 16

Allen of Kansas will accompany Mr. Rockefeller on part of his tour.

ASKS BOSTON TO AID MARNE GIFT

"Memorial Week" Is Proclaimed by Mayor Peters; All Urged to Aid

By proclamation of Mayor Peters, this is "Marne Memorial Week" in Boston. He calls upon every resident to contribute something to help purchase a statute to be placed on the River Marne to commemorate the spot where the French, under Joffre, stopped the Germans and saved civilization.

"I request," says the Mayor's proclamation, "that during this week a free-will offering be made by the citizens of Boston to 'America's Gift to France,' and subscribe something, be it only one cent, since the amount collected is far less important than the number of subscribers. Just as all France united to send us the Statue of Liberty, now let us reciprocate in like manner. Contributions may be sent to Arthur Adams, chairman for Suffolk County, No. 135 Devonshire street, Boston.

The Mayor says the proposed gift "will serve to bind even closer the two greatest republics of the world in lasting friendship."

WANT TROLLEY LINE BARRED FROM BOSTON

Resolutions petitioning the Mayor and City Council to revoke the franchise of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company in Boston because the latter concern has announced it will discontinue to operate in Hyde Park and will refuse to spend money for improving equipment anywhere in this city were passed at a meeting of the Germantown Citizens' Association in West Roxbury.

The resolutions call upon the Mayor and City Council to hold a public meeting for the discussion of the matter at the earliest possible moment.

Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in Boston for week ending Saturday, March 20th, on shipments sold out, ranged from 11 cents to 28.50 cents per pound and averaged 18.87 cents per pound.—Advertisement.

Asks 10 Years in Jail, but Gets 6 Months

"If you send me to jail, judge, give me a ten-year term," was the request made to Associate Judge William J. Day in the South Boston court today by Frederick J. Nolan of Tremont street. Nolan formerly lived in South Boston.

Nolan was arraigned on a charge of non-support of two minor children. He became enraged when counsel for his wife condemned him for failure to support his family.

"I'm sorry I can't accommodate you with the term of imprisonment you ask for," said Judge Day. "But I'll give you six months and perhaps that will cool you off."

WRITER SAYS NEW WAR WOULD END WHITE MAN

Peter MacQueen, war correspondent, writer and lecturer, declared at the American Forum in Faneuil Hall that another great war in the near future would inevitably mean the end of the white man's domination of the world. The yellow races would seize the opportunity presented by the spectacle of the enfeeblement of the white races and run loose in hordes, he asserted.

Mr. MacQueen talked on "Peace and Reconstruction."

Story by CYNTHIA STOCKLEY

Scenario by ADRIAN JOHNSON

April Poole, young, pretty and clever, was one of the literary successes of the day.

Kerry Sarle was the head of the publishing house of Sarle & Co., whose magazines April's writings had helped toward fame.

April writes a story which she reads to Kerry Sarle—a story of romance and adventure which carries the reader from the dreary library of an English mansion to a costume ball in Greenwich Village, and on, by ocean liner, to a dramatic moment in a hut in Cape Town, South Africa.

As the tale is spun by April, she borrows Kerry Sarle's name and character for her hero, a South African millionaire.

For the whimsical, daring adventuress of the story she coolly names herself.

There are thrilling moments of threatened tragedy, where scandal (and even death) lurks in the wake of her ship of romance.

But for the seeming folly of April in the story, the April of real life is weaving a romance with quite another view.

Kerry Sarle thought her a fine little pal. He took her charms for granted. He had never noticed that real love was just around the corner.

April's method of securing the final chapter for her delightful fiction romance is the beginning of a new story for April and Kerry.

Do you realize our Army and Navy would be helpless without a Merchant Marine of 6,000,000 gross tons?

Do you realize that 10,000,000 gross tons are required to carry sixty per cent of our foreign trade?

Do you realize that American vessels engaged in foreign trade carried less than ten per cent of our trade in prewar days; that the total tonnage engaged in foreign trade was less than 2,000,000 gross tons?

As a New England manufacturer, will you give your support to the American Merchant Marine?

HOPE TO SAVE CITY MILLIONS

Mayor Will Push New Bill for the Widening of Exchange Street

Mayor Peters announced today that he would direct Corporation Counsel Hill to introduce a new bill in the Legislature for the widening of Exchange street, in order to save the city a possible expenditure of $10,000,000 later.

In a statement to the press, the Mayor rapped the Legislature for killing a previous bill, saying:

"Apart from the necessity of issuing bonds, the matter was one of purely local concern, as to which the judgment of the city authorities ought to have been accepted as conclusive. No one appeared against the bill except the owners of the land immediately affected. Nevertheless, the legislative committee reported against it, and their action was sustained by the Legislature."

Introduction of another bill is deemed necessary by the Mayor because an office building is to be erected at the corner of Exchange and State streets, occupying the whole of the lot. All possibility of widening Exchange street will be ended if this is accomplished, the Mayor states.

'PEG O' MY HEART' AUTHOR WINNER IN MOVIE SUIT

Washington, March 22.—The Supreme Court today decided in favor of J. Hartley Manners, author of "Peg O' My Heart," who sold the theatrical rights of the play to Oliver Morosco, but claimed he had not sold the movie rights. The case was to determine whether a contract to produce and represent under the copyright law also carries with it the right to the movie production. The decision of the lower court was reversed.

MUSEUM GIVEN ART COLLECTION

Plymouth, March 22.—Bequests of valuable oil paintings, including one Rubens, are made to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts by the will of Mrs. Annie Corliss Thomas. The will disposes of approximately $250,000, of which $100,000 is in personal property, and there are several charitable and public bequests.

Paintings willed to the Boston Museum include two Teniers, a Claude Bernet, Rubens, DeVole and a Salmon. These and other art objects and relics of the Revolutionary War were collected by the late William Appleton Thomas, husband of Mrs. Thomas. The widow left $10,000 to be used in whole or in part by the Pilgrim Society of Plymouth to help the success of the Plymouth Tercentenary celebration this year. Another bequest of $10,000 was made to Jordan Hospital, Plymouth, for two beds as a Thomas memorial. The Animal Rescue of Boston receives $5,000, and all books will go to the Public Library of Kingston, where lies the Thomas 100-acre farm.

John Quinn, native of Ireland, who served the Thomas' seventeen years, was left fifty acres, and Mike McGrath was left two timber plots and $1,000. The will provides that "all animals and pets are to be mercifully put to sleep by some one who will do it properly." There are more than a dozen bequests of from $1,000 to $10,000.

DENY PENSION TO WIDOW OF FIREMAN

Mayor Peters vetoed today a resolve passed by the City Council favoring legislation for the pensioning of the widow of Edward A. Shea, a fireman, who, it is claimed, died from injuries received in the Merrimac street fire of February, 1898. The Mayor said the records show death was caused by blood poisoning resulting from an infection of the arm and occurred in March, 1919.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands, Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

JAVA DANCER IN FOLLIES A HIT

New Orchestra of ex-Symphony Oriental Terpschorean Number Letter Perfect

Dancing as it is done in far-off Java is shown by Ada Forman, the feature dancer with "The Greenwich Village Follies," at the Shubert Theatre. Miss Forman has only been on the stage for a short time, but has risen to an enviable position among the dancing experts of the day. She attended Bryn Mawr College, but forsook it for the footlights.

The costume worn by Miss Forman in the Java number is an exact replica of the one worn by the Javanese palace dancers. No less person than Minister Cramer from The Netherlands to the United States, and a former Governor of Java, has declared the dance letter perfect, after seeing Miss Forman render it in New York, last Winter.

Miss Forman comes from Pasadena, Cal., and first took up dancing while attending school. A subsequent pleasure trip to the Orient brought her to Java, where she saw the Palace Dance, and she decided that it would go well on the American stage.

That it has "gone over," is shown by the fact that she has been doing the Palace Dance on Broadway for four seasons, and this is the first time in that number of years that she has left the Rialto. Miss Forman also dances the Yong Sarg Marionette number, putting it on for the first time in Boston.

DECLARE TENANTS' LEAGUE WILL SOLVE BOSTON'S RENT PROBLEM

Real estate men, clubwomen, business men, lawyers, legislators, officials and tenants have heartily endorsed the league and the aims of the Hays bill.

PRAISE IS GENERAL.

Particularly gratifying to the Boston American, striving as always for a square deal all round, is the endorsement of reputable real estate men, who state that the provisions of the Hays bill for a 10 per cent. net profit on their investments is a most liberal one.

Signed enrollment blanks are pouring into the American from all portions of the Commonwealth, showing how warmly the tenants of the State are in sympathy with the aims of the league, of which Victor Heath, chairman of the former Boston Public Safety Committee, is chairman.

Perhaps the most significant of the hundreds of remarkable endorsements of the aims of the league is that of Ex-Representative B. H. Spinney, treasurer of the Boston Dwelling House Company, of which Cardinal O'Connell, Robert Winsor and Ridder Peabody are members.

No less gratifying than the lavish endorsement of this organization is that of three of Boston's most prominent clubwomen. Several prominent women's organizations are studying the Hays bill, with a view to giving it their support.

Any organizations wishing to have the rent problem discussed by experts and the provisions of the Hays bill explained to their members, may secure speakers by making a request to the Speakers' Bureau, Rent Editor, Boston American, No. 89 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Every tenant in Massachusetts is urged to join the Boston American Tenants League at once by signing and mailing the blank printed in today's American. Only united effort will solve this vital problem.

10 PER CENT. PROFIT ENOUGH.

Former Representative Burgess H. Spinney, a leading Boston broker, and treasurer of Boston Dwelling House Company which owns apartment houses at Forest Hills containing 72 suites.

"I agree with John J. Martin, vice-president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, that ten per cent. net profit is enough for any real estate investor to get for his property in rental. I believe that anything that can be done to curb rent profiteering should be done. The housing problem is one of the biggest problems now before New England and particularly Boston and everything possible should be done to solve it properly.

"The rent profiteer has no proper place in the scheme of things. He should be eliminated. The whole trouble so far as rent profiteering goes in this city emanates from the Allston and Brighton sections. A certain class of persons who formerly erected apartment houses, filled them up by giving tenants two or three month free, then sold them to trustees, are the persons who are now gouging the public. The owner of a certain apartment house on Commonwealth avenue, Allston, has raised his rents from $35 a month to $60. That is clearly profiteering.

"The rents on our suites at Forest Hills are based on the actual cost of maintaining the property. They were built for the primary purpose of helping the people of this city."

Walter B. Bushway of Jamaica Plain, manager of the Boston Dwelling House Association:

"Something radical must be done to check the rent profiteers. Some of the things that are being done by these profiteers today are really criminal. Women come to me every day trying to rent some of our model apartments at Forest Hill. The stories that some of them tell are pitiable. In some instance they are widows with small children. Their rent has been hoisted so high that they cannot pay. Then they go around looking for another place and many landlords will not take them because of their children. It is a crime. It is outrageous."

Sanford Bates, State Commissioner of Corrections:

"Organizing a league of tenants is a constructive effort to reduce the cost of living. That there is sentiment for such a movement is evidence that the general public needs protection. Special interests are organized. Governor Allen said that capital and labor are organized, but that about 90 per cent. of the people between these groups are unorganized. The tenant is in this class."

In addition, three women's organizations are considering the bill. The Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association, through its legislative chairman, Mrs. James D. Tillinghast, will, at its board meeting, next Thursday morning, at 11:30, listen to an explanation of the Hays bill by its author, Representative Martin Hays. This is one of the bills designed to relieve the housing situation. The Flim Club, at its next meeting, the first Friday in April, at the Hotel Brunswick, will also hear the bill explained by Representative Hays. The Women's Municipal League, through its authority on housing and rents, Mrs. Frederick T. Lord, is considering the bill.

REPORT 20,957 HOUSES SHORT

State Commerce Probe Reveals Springfield Has Most Acute Situation

There is a shortage of 20,957 houses in Massachusetts, according to the maximum figures received from forty-two cities and towns out of 354 in the State by the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, which is conducting a State-wide inquiry into the housing situation. Of the figures thus far received, Springfield heads the list with a shortage of between 2,000 and 5,000, with Hyannis on the Cape showing a clean slate.

Out of the seventy-nine chambers affiliated with the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, twenty-one have housing committees, seven cities have housing corporations organized, while six contemplate having them in the near future.

The consultation committee of housing of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, which has just been organized for the purpose of discussing the housing situation in Massachusetts, will give advice and suggestions to committees and persons. It is not the intention of the committee to carry on surveys by visiting the various places. They will, however, receive and give advice and suggestions to delegates who may call. They will also undertake to issue bulletins on specific plans of relief.

GIVE FREE SERVICE.

The committee will meet again on next Wednesday and weekly thereafter for the discussion of the problems of housing. Their services will be available without expense to cities and towns. It is composed of Lester H. Allen, Newton Highlands; Maurice F. Reidy, Worcester; D. H. McLellan, Boston Joseph D. Leland, Boston; Colonel Henry A. Root, Boston; Charles S. Bird, Jr., East Walpole; John Nolan, Cambridge; Cornelius A. Parker, Boston; Guy A. Ham, Boston.

The questionaire which has been prepared and already sent throughout the State by the Chamber to the various chambers reads:

1. Is there a housing shortage in your community? (a) If so, is it a shortage of industrial houses in particular or a general shortage of all kinds of residences? (b) State approximately the number of houses needed to relieve your shortage.

2. Has any effort been made to solve your problem in an organized way, such as by the formation of a Housing Corporation? (a) If so, state by whom it was formed, capitalization, number of houses completed to date; number planned. (b) Was the capital largely raised (a) by popular subscription; (b) subscriptions from industrial citizens; (c) subscriptions from industries; or (d) what other method? (c) Are the houses being readily sold in advance of construction, or upon completion; or are they being rented?

3. Has your organization a housing committee? Give the name and address of the chairman.

LABOR LEAVING STATE.

Secretary Stacy of the Chamber said that a very skilful play is being made, according to one manufacturer, to attract labor out of Massachusetts, by letters sent out from a number of States, stating that good housing conditions exist in their sections. As a result labor has slowly trickled out to Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut and elsewhere. Every time labor goes out, it was stated, manufacturers here felt the result in shortness of production and housing facilities.

South End Woman Gets Eviction Notice

Eviction notice has been served upon Mrs. A. F. Crane of No. 155 Warren avenue, Boston, by Edwin S. Martin of Chestnut Hill, Brookline, the owner of the property. Mrs. Crane, who conducts a rooming house, is the sole support of a sick husband and a seven-year-old son.

When Martin called for the rent, which became due on the 15th of this month, Mrs. Crane stated that she would be unable to pay it then, whereupon, according to her statement, Martin conducted himself in such a fashion that it made her husband, lying ill in the next room, hysterical and it became necessary to send him to the hospital.

SAYS NO REPAIRS MADE.

Urgent requests for repairs, according to Mrs. Crane, have gone unheeded. Throughout the Winter it is stated that nothing has been done to remedy the following inconveniences: A coal-hungry furnace which produces no heat, a leaky toilet on the second floor which makes a first floor closet unfit to use, a smoky, antiquated kitchen stove which will not bake, a cold air draft for the furnace which must be regulated from the sidewalk, loose windows which are little protection against the cold.

Mrs. Crane, who is at present paying $70 per month for rent, declared that it was rumored that the house had rented during the early part of the war for $75. This statement, however, is denied by Mr. Martin, who declares that the lowest rate ever charged was $65 per month.

SAYS SHE SLAMMED DOOR.

According to Mr. Martin's statement Mrs. Crane was forced to leave the last house which she occupied and is bent on making trouble for him. He stated that he did not send the eviction notice until Mrs. Crane had flatly told him that she would move out, and also that it would not be necessary for him to come for the rent, which was overdue, until April first. He also stated that when he came to show the house to a prospective tenant, the door was slammed in his face.

Malden Tenants Unite to Fight High Rents

As the first step against rent profiteering, nearly 100 Malden residents formed an organization to be known as the Malden Tenants' Association, at a protest meeting in the Myrtle Street Synagogue.

It was suggested by former Councilman Jacob W. Mover, that Governor Coolidge call upon the Legislature to allow the cities and towns to regulate rentals and settle their own problems. He said that this plan would permanently solve all rent profiteering.

Winthrop Will Have a Committee on Complaints

Harry E. Wright, chairman of the Winthrop Selectmen, said today that a committee to hear rent complaints of Winthrop residents would be appointed at the meeting of the Selectmen in the Town Hall tonight. The appointments, he said, followed the receipt of a circular from the State Commission on Necessaries of Life recommending such a course. Renters will be urged to report all unfair increases in rent or other unjust treatment to the committee. Each complaint will receive a thorough investigation, Chairman Wright stated.

Pittsfield Favors Hays Bill

Pittsfield, March 22.—The Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce is favorably disposed toward the Hays rent bill now before the judiciary committee, Secretary H. Chester Lyon of the Chamber said today that "legislation which protects tenant and insures a reasonable return for the landlord as the Hays act seems to do, will meet with general approval in Pittsfield."

This is Better Than Laxatives

One NR Tablet Each Night For A Week Will Correct Your Constipation and Make Constant Dosing Unnecessary. Try It.

Poor digestion and assimilation mean a poorly nourished body and low vitality. Poor elimination means clogged bowels, fermentation, putrifaction and the formation of poisonous gases which are absorbed by the blood and carried through the body.

The result is weakness, headaches, dizziness, coated tongue, inactive liver, bilious attacks, loss of energy, nervousness, poor appetite, impoverished blood, sallow complexion, pimples, skin disease, and often times serious illness.

Ordinary laxatives, purges and cathartics—salts, oils, calomel and the like—may relieve for a few hours, but real, lasting benefit can only come through use of medicine that tones up and strengthens the digestive as well as the eliminative organs.

Get a 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one tablet each night for a week. Relief will follow the very first dose, but a few days will elapse before you feel and realize the full benefit. When you get straightened out and feel just right again, need not take medicine every day—an occasional NR Tablet will then keep your system in good condition and you will always feel your best. Remember, keeping well is easier and cheaper than getting sick.

Corn Silk! The same "silk" you see protruding from the husk of corn, produces a fine medicine for kidney and bladder irregularities, when compounded with other simple drugs as in Balmwort Tablets.

Balmwort Tablets contain a powerful extract of corn silk, which quickly relieves the inflammation and congestion that causes such distress as pains in back and hips, rheumatic twinges, nervousness, severe headaches, accompanied by frequent desire to eliminate, followed by scalding, burning sensation. The patient is compelled to arise frequently to relieve painful pressure, even though a scanty flow follows. The eyes appear "bloodshot," the sleep is restless, and sometimes fever, followed by chills, cause great unrest. It is unwise to neglect such symptoms, when a few doses of Balmwort Tablets can be taken for relief. Alice Trebough, 5627 South Twenty-fourth street, Omaha, Neb., writes: "I have used one tube of your Balmwort Tablets and find that they are the best I have ever used for kidney and bladder trouble."

RED SOX DEFEAT GIANTS, 4 TO 3, AND EVEN UP ON THE BIG SERIES

HOOPER IS BIG STAR OF GAME

Pounds Out Homer and Double at Critical Times and Fields Brilliantly.

By JACK CONWAY.

Wichita Falls, Tex., March 22.—Harry Hooper and the Red Sox renewed operations against the Giants here today. If Hooper plays the kind of ball he did for the Barrow tourists at Dallas, the chances are the New York outfit will be beaten.

Things have got to the state where Jawn McGraw is planning to ask for some sort of an injunction which will prevent the Californian from hoking up perfectly good ball games by knocking the old apples over the garden wall, by tossing men out at first and third and such playful things.

Hooper is today playing better ball than any member of the Sox or Giants. With little more than a week of training, the Red Sox captain is traveling at the speed which ball players usually reach along in July.

At Dallas Hooper gave a wonderful exhibition of baseball. At the bat he got a home run and a double. His home run came in the fifth inning when the Giants were leading, 1 to 0. It was a terrific smash which cleared the right field fence by the proverbial mile. As Hoyt was on first at the time as a result of a single, the Sox hopped into the lead, 2 to 1.

Hooper Comes to Rescue Again

When the Giants forged into the lead by getting two more runs in the sixth, Hooper doubled in the seventh after Devine singled. The catcher later scored when Foster punched out a single.

In the field Hooper played a brilliant game. His throw to Kauff out at the plate in the second when Henry tried to score on a safety by Kelly. The latter reached second when Snyder walked. It looked like a sure Giant score when Toney smashed a hard hit to right field. Hooper, however, came in like a flash, got the ball on the first bound and whipped it to McInnis at first in time to get the New York pitcher.

Once more in the eighth inning Hooper showed why he is rated as one of the game's outfield marvels. With one down, Kelly singled and continued on to second when Snyder also reached out in safety. Barnes then fled to Hooper in deep right field. Kelly started for third after the catch, but Scott was playing with the ball when the Giants' first baseman slid into the bag.

It looks as though Hooper is setting a stiff pace for the other Red Sox players. Harry says his arm is feeling as good right now as it ever did at mid-season. He's proving this to be so by the way he is throwing.

And as for Hooper himself, he is out for some sort of a home run record. His straight wallop at Dallas was the second one he has made since the practice games started. His initial home run of the year was made against Pittsburgh at Hot Springs.

Incidentally, the Sox won the game at Dallas from the Giants, 4 to 2. This made it one all, as the Giants took the opening tussle of the twenty-one game series.

Karr to Start Game for the Barrows

Hoyt and Pennock did the pitching for Boston. Hoyt looked mighty good and had the Giants at his mercy. Pennock also had a lot of stuff, but was wild. Pennock presented the Giants with two runs in the sixth. After striking out the first batter, he gave four bases on balls in a row, which, along with a single, gave the outfit from Brodway a couple of tallies.

Marsans, the Cuban, made his debut as a member of the Red Sox. He played centre field. He failed to hit safely, but had a perfect day in the field. One of his catches was made in deep centre field after a hard run.

At Wichita today Barrow planned to use Sen Karr, the best looking of his rookie hurlers, and Holborrow and Leasure in the box. To left the rest of his fingers at Dallas. The other players to make the trip here were Hooper, right field; Foster, third base; Mahoney, left field; Marsans, centre field; McInnis, first base; McNally, second base; Scott, shortstop; Devine and Walters, catchers; Hiller and Ehel, utility players.

The other members of the squad remained at Dallas in charge of Paddy Livingston. They were booked to engage in a strenuous workout there.

BOSTON TENNIS PLAYERS BEAT NEW YORKERS AGAIN

The Boston tennis players won over the New York representatives in the singles and doubles match on the second day of the intercity inning tournament. A. S. Dabney defeated Leonard Beekman in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1; while Irving Wright and Harry C. Johnson, Boston, triumphed over Leonard Beekman and Jean C. Mathey, 7—5, 6—1. The final count in the tournament is 7 to 2 in the Boston team's favor.

HOW PUTT WON FOR HAGEN

Was One Down at 35th Hole in Match With Barnes When Stroke Was Made

By WALTER C. HAGEN,
Open Golf Champion.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 22.—With reports from the North of snow several feet deep and zero weather ranging from the Rockies to the Atlantic seaboard, golfers in the South are batting the little white pill around grass-covered greens and fairways and wondering how things are in any such thing as snow any place in the land.

My stay in East Florida was just long enough to get up a real appetite for the game again and when I journeyed over to Belleaire I felt like letting out at the ball and swinging with all the enthusiasm of mid-summer. It makes a big difference in one's score when this is possible and I completed the first eighteen holes at Belleaire in an even seventy and no golf course in the country is any harder to score on. A week's play here gave me a lot of confidence in my match with Barnes which took place over in New Orleans at the Country Club links.

Here we found things entirely different. Too much rain had left the course in a poor condition and when I played a practice round on Saturday I was much surprised. No golfer can work up much enthusiasm over a soggy course, but I figured that if the going was tough for me my opponent would find it just as difficult to score on.

I was more than pleased to get the decision over Barnes under the circumstances. When we quit all even in the morning I felt that a break in the luck of either one of us would decide the issue and kept looking for that break to come in my favor.

Putting Usually Decides Matters

In a match of this kind it is usually the putting that decides matters. When I arrived at the seventeenth green, which was really the thirty-fifth hole, and found myself one down, I realized that the opportunity had arrived, and facing a fifteen-foot putt, I started the ball for the hole with plenty of steam behind it. The ball would have run several feet past the cup had it been off the line, but when it hit the back of the cup with a thud and then settled down in the old tin I knew that it was a good omen. I had the nerve to wait patiently then for my opponent to make a slip on the first extra hole. Jim hooked his tee shot and the match was mine.

It was a match that I enjoyed immensely, and the large gallery seemed to like it too. The crowd followed us every step of the way and seemed to be bent on seeing every shot played. The scores were not what they would have been had conditions been more favorable, but match play is greatly different from a medal round. If the contest is close all the way, a bad hole here and there does not make so much difference.

Contests of this kind create a lot of interest in the game, and there should be more of them played. Naturally there was a lot of interest in the case of Barnes and myself, as we had finished the season of 1919 on practically even terms. After several months' dickering we finally agreed to play at New Orleans for a purse of fifteen hundred, to be split, a thousand to the winner and five hundred to the loser.

Thinks Golfers Entitled to Return

Some criticism came out of my refusal to play last Fall in St. Louis for a purse of $1,600 and a like amount offered in New York. My point was that the money offered was not enough. In any other sport in this country the bringing together of two players who laid claim to championship titles would have called for a purse of from ten to twenty thousand dollars. It may not be worth as much to watch a game of golf, but I am sure that the fifteen hundred that witnessed the match at New Orleans might have been induced to give up the dollars each and never have kicked on being over charged.

As far as the actual money goes, I would have been perfectly willing to play for nothing, or for mere expenses. Playing for expenses is nothing new to any of the pros. During the war I took part in almost fifty Red Cross matches. Barnes did the same thing, and it meant many inconvenient trips to remote parts of the country. Of course all of this was for the cause and we were only too glad to help out in our small way. A great deal of money was raised, all of which was a drop in the bucket compared with what was actually collected from all sources, but it was our bit and we did it cheerfully.

Golf exhibitions have since then been put on a different plane. It has been demonstrated that spectators will pay a nominal sum to see a first class tournament. The cost to a fan going out in the country for an afternoon is something like four or five dollars and a dollar or two more would not keep him back.

To a golf enthusiast a good match is as interesting as a baseball or a football game. I believe the time is coming when it will not be thought strange to ask the gallery to pay to see big championship tournaments.

MAINE REFEREE TO SELECT BOUT WINNER

Portland, Me., March 22.—A decision is to be given at the end of the Shevlin-Doyle bout here tomorrow night. It is announced that as the winner of the battle is to be given a bout with Young Kloby, Referee Frank De Rico would announce the winner. It will be the first referee's verdict rendered in this State since the present boxing law, which permits six-round, no decision bouts, was enacted some twenty years ago.

ALFIE SHRUBB MAY COACH BRITISH OLYMPIC TEAM

Alfie Shrubb, former trainer of Harvard and holder of many of the world's long-distance records, has been mentioned as coach of the British team in the coming Olympic games. Shrubb, at present, has been training the Oxford athletes and only the other day was appointed trainer of the Oxford-Cambridge relay team that will come to America to compete in the Penn relay games April 30 and May 3.

Burns Trains Hard for Londos Bout

Cyclone Burns has laid aside his duties as instructor in order to be able to devote his entire attention to training for his match with Jim Londos, which takes place at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday night. This means that Burns will be seen at his best, which spells trouble for the Greek.

Londos, on his previous appearances here, proved to be a heavyweight of rare speed, using tactics similar to those used by Kilonis. Burns always did well against this type of matman and he figures that Londos, good as he is, will prove no exception to the rule.

MILLER STILL A HOLDOUT

Former Pirate Hurler Declines $5,000 Contract Tendered by the Braves

By NICK FLATLEY.

Columbus, Ga., March 22.—Raucous cries of help continue to ascend from the Braves' training camp regarding the much-discussed pitching situation. Things brightened up the other rainy day when it was announced that John Paul Jones had signed and Frank Miller had been purchased from the Pirates. But gilding the future is precarious at best in this baseball life.

John Paul, etc., has reported sure enough, but alas! Frank, the real big leaguer, has not. Miller will be with us not. At least he has wired the interesting information that he has retired from the pastime. That usually means nothing but some laughs and delay, as witness the case of Jones. But this matter looks different.

Miller was a holt-out with the Pirates wanting $5,000 a year. Last year he grabbed off $3,100 for something. B. Dreyfuss, who pays the Pittsburgh bills, couldn't see it and asked waivers on the Miller party. So the Braves picked him off gleefully. They wired him at Bravo, Mich., telling him the glad news, offering the $5,000 he wanted from Barney.

Wire From Miller Is Great Shock

Naturally it was a great shock when his return wire got here. It may be that Miller has heard the crying need for pitchers and thinks he can get more capital or may be Braves sounds too much like Bravo or something. But anyhow that's how the situation stands this final day of practice in Columbus, and a few seattles have splattered down into the red clay mud of Georgia.

According to all the veterans, Miller was a mighty fine looking pitcher last season. It was really his first good year since he broke into the game with the White Sox back in '14. At that time he looked like the wonder of the ages and was carefully nursed along. But he was stricken ill in '15 and until the last campaign never did seem to recover his full strength.

The club hasn't given up hope of bringing the big fellow into line, but it's the same sort of hope that possessed the wise clerks before the ultimate Supreme Court decision. Bravo must be quite a village to assure one of its prominent citizens a better job than one that would pay $5,000 for some three hours' work a week for six months.

One ray of hope broke through the gloom, however, when John Scott arrived in camp. The big fellow there's come to terms yet but expresses his readiness to talk terms with Owner Grant. Which affords some consolation, anyway.

Series With Tigers Starts Tomorrow

The Braves went through the usual two sessions today and gave three of those cheers as there will be no more long workouts until Braves Field is reached, sometime in the vague future. The Tigers get in tomorrow when the eighteen-game series starts.

Jones, who pulled in Sunday after getting past all the train wrecks in Louisiana, appears to be in pretty good shape and announces that his weight is just what it should be. He lost quite a bit of poundage last Fall but worked it back during the Winter. It will be a weak or more before he can be expected to help out at all in the battles with the American League, the battles with the American Leaguers.

The team was to have a short practice game today with orders for nobody to break any legs or arms. The athletes are in fairly good trim but need pressure of a few real games to get them down to the fine point in condition. They will probably get all the pressure the law allows when Cobb and Veach and the rest get going.

Pillingim, Gowdy and Morgan, who have been hors de combat, if you have been hors de combat, if you class array for the practice and will be ready anytime the real milling starts.

Matches can be made with Mr. S. Kronberg, No. 143 Dudley street, Roxbury, for the 108, 115, 125 and 145-pound classes or for exhibition bouts.

Fitton A. C. and Bunker Hill Teams in Important Contest at East Armory

The winner of the Fitton A. C.-Bunker Hill basket ball series, the deciding game of which will be at the East Armory tonight, may prove the aggregation to tackle Cohasset A. Rumors of other pro combinations are going to challenge the winner of the Roxbury Post 44, American Legion-South Boston K. of C. struggle, which will also be decided at the East Armory tonight. Medford High Independents, which five will tackle Somerville High Independents at the carnival Monday evening, added Charlie Bowen to their already strong lineup.

THE YOUNG DIANA

Story of Tense Mystery in Which Heroine Holds Key to Youth

By Marie Corelli

What Has Gone Before

Diana is the spinster daughter of well-to-do commonplace parents. The May family resides at Rose Lea, an estate on the coast of Devon. Diana receives a letter from Sophy Lansing, including a strange advertisement. She overhears her parents discussing her age and declaring that she is in the way. She goes bathing and fails to appear for breakfast. Her clothes are found neatly folded near the water's edge. While there is mourning at Rose Lea, Diana is talking things over with her friend Sophy in London.

DIANA released her hands from her friend's eager grasp and took off her hat. There was a gleam of whimsical humor in her eyes.

"One moment, and I'll explain everything," she said. "But, first of all, let me tell you why I sent you a message in advance, instead of coming to you direct. It's because I'm obliged for the present to be like a traveling royalty, incog. Your servants must not know my real name—to them and to everybody else who sees me here, I'm Miss Graham—not Miss May. Miss May is dead! As Pegotty says in 'David Copperfield,' she's 'drowned-dead.' 'Drowndead' this very morning!"

She laughed; Sophy Lansing looked as she felt, utterly bewildered.

"You are a positive enigma, Diana!" she said. "Of course when I got your note I understood you had some reason or other for wishing to be incog., and I told my maids that I expected a friend to stay with me, a Miss Graham, and that she would come this afternoon—so that's all right! But, about the drowning business——"

"You'll see it mentioned, no doubt, in the papers tomorrow," said Diana. "Under various headings: 'Bathing Fatality' or 'Sad End of a Lady.' And you'll probably get a black-bordered letter from Mr. or Pa, or both, of us."

"Diana!" exclaimed Sophy, vehemently. "You are too provoking! Tell me all about it—straight!"

"There's not so very much to tell," answered Diana, in her sweet, mellow accent, thrilled at the moment by a note of sadness. "Only that last night I had the final disillusion of my life—I found that my father and mother did not really love me——"

"Love you!" interrupted Sophy, heatedly. "You dear goose! There's no such thing as love in their composition!"

Silly Conceit

"Maybe not," said Diana. "But if there is, they've none to spare for me. You see, dear Sophy, it's all the fault of my silly conceit—I really thought I was useful, even necessary to the old people, and that they cared for me, but they don't. My father say most emphatically that I was 'in the way,' and my mother rather agreed to that, made up my mind to get them of my presence. Which I have done. For ever!"

"For ever!" echoed Sophy. "My poor dear Diana——"

"No, I'm not a poor dear Diana," she answered, smiling—"I'm a dead and gone Diana! You will see me in the leading obituary columns of the newspapers tomorrow!"

"But how——"

"The how and the when and the why are thus!" and Diana played with the silken tassels of the girdle which belted in the solidity chiffon and lace of her friend's tea-gown. "This very morning, as ever was, I went for my usual morning dip in the sea at a cove not a quarter of a mile away from the house. I knew that at a certain hour there would be a high tide, which, of course, on any other day I would have avoided. I went to the spot, dressed in two of everything——"

"Two of everything," Sophy murmured bewilderedly.

New Method of Reducing Fat

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh two, three or four pounds a week, without injury to the stomach, the cause of wrinkles, the help or exercising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results, however, follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little tablets. We say economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets must be used in accordance with the famous prescription can be obtained of any druggist or may be ordered from The Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., for one dollar the box case, which is a decidedly economical price considering the number of tablets each case contains. They are harmless.

"Yes, you pretty little thick-head! Two of everything! Don't you see? Being as this an old clothes-horse, that was easy for me. Two 'combys'—two chemises, two petticoats, two serge gowns—having no figure I wear no corsets, so I didn't have two of those. Two pairs of knickers, two pairs of stockings—one pair of shoes on, another pair off and carried secretly under my bathing gown along with my bath hat, as to start with I wore a black straw one. Then, when I got to the cove, I disrobed myself of one set of garments, and put them with my straw hat and one pair of shoes all in an orderly heap on a rock out of the way of the water, as any sensible person intending to take baths would do. Then I waited for the high tide.

"It came swiftly and surely, and soon filled the cove—big waves came with it, rolling in with a splendid dash and roar, and at the proper psychological moment I threw in all my bathing things as far out to sea as I could from the summit of the rock where I stood—I saw them whirled round and round in the whelming flood!—in the whelming flood, Sophy!—where my dear Pa and Ma believe I also have been whelmed! Then, when they had nearly disappeared in the hollow of a receding mass of water, I put on my pink cloak and, completely clothed in my one set of decent garments, I quietly walked away."

"Walked away? Where to?"

Good Walker

"Not to the nearest railway station, you may be sure!" replied Diana. "I might have been known there and traced. I'm a good walker, and it was quite early—only a little after seven—so I struck across some fields and west inland for about six or eight miles. Then I came upon a little out-of-the-way station connected with a branch line to London—happily a train was just due, and I took it. I had saved five pounds on the housekeeping last month—I had intended to give them back to my mother—but considering everything—I felt I might take that small sum for myself without too much as a prick of conscience! So that's my story—and here I am!"

"And here you'll stay!" said Sophy eagerly. "Not a soul shall know who you are——"

"I'll stay for two or three days, but not longer," said Diana. "I want to get abroad as quickly as possible. And I'm afraid I shall have to ask you to lend me a little money——"

"I'll lend or give you anything you want," interrupted Sophy quickly. "Surely you know that!"

"Surely I know that you are one of the kindest-hearted little women in the world!" said Diana. "And your wealthy old bachelor uncle never did a wiser thing than when he left you two thousand a year! Why you remain single I can never understand!"

"That's because you are a sentimental goose!" declared Sophy. "If you knew you as I know you would see that it's just that two thousand that does it! The men who propose to me—and there are a good few—don't see beyond the two thousand first, and me afterwards! Or rather, let us say, some of them see only the two thousand without me altogether! All the nonsense in poetry books about love and devotion, sigh and die, and moon and spoon doesn't count! I've lived till I'm thirty-five and I've never met a man yet who was worth a trifle of a tear! They are all sensualists and money-grubbers — polygamous and monogamous—and the only thing to be done with them is to make them work to keep the world going, though even that seems little use sometimes."

"Sophy dear, are you becoming a pessimist?" asked Diana, half smiling. "Surely it is a beautiful world!"

Asked Plans

"Yes—it's beautiful in a natural way—but the artificiality of human life is it is depressing and disgusting! Don't let us talk of it—tell me why you are going abroad? What are your plans."

Diana took a neat leather case from her pocket and drew out of it a folded slip of paper.

"You sent me that!" she said.

"That advertisement!" she exclaimed. "The man who wants any woman alone in the world, without claims on her time or her affections! Oh, Diana, you don't mean it! You're not really going on such a wild-goose chase?"

"What have I to lose? I do!" said Diana, quietly. "I'm old enough to take care of myself. And I fulfil all the requirements—I am a woman of mature years—I'm courageous and determined, and I have a fair knowledge of modern science. I'm well educated, especially in 'languages and literature,' thanks to my solitary studies—and as I've nothing to look forward to in the world I'm not afraid to take risks.

Humoresque

Screen Version Novelized By Jane McLean

Fannie Hurst's Story in a Tense Film Drama Featuring Alma Rubens

Watch for It in Motion Pictures

"Humoresque" is a Cosmopolitan production. Scenario by Frances Marion, direction of Frank Borzage. Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft picture.

IZZY departed on his honeymoon and Esther and her younger brother returned to college. For a while Leon held forth alone in the house in the suburbs.

Not, for long. There were too many engagements to fill, and even in the waning musical season the demands to hear the young man play showed no sign of abating. "They never get tired of Leon," Hancock said with a note of personal pride. "He became he plays with his soul every time."

No word had been received of Miss Berg, who was still abroad. It was Abrahm who first brought news of her unexpectedly after the end of the season, when Leon had settled down to a rest.

"Who do you think I saw today?" he asked casually at dinner.

Mama Kantor guessed and guessed again, and each time Abrahm shook his head. "An old friend," he announced at last. "The feller that used to sell me brasses by the factory."

"Sol Ginsberg?"

"Sure," Abrahm nodded; "he's got no hair, not much."

"Too much money, it drives away the hair," reflected Mama Kantor.

"If you give me time, Abrahm went on. "Even if he is a millioner we shouldn't be stuck up."

Leon Is Patient

"He didn't say nothing about Allen street?"

"No, and I didn't ask by him—that street ain't what it was when we was there, mama; it's got a small now and crowds." He threw up his hands.

Leon ate on, listening for word of Gina. It came at last.

"That daughter that's studying music, he says, she comes back soon."

"He didn't say when, did he?" Leon intervened.

"No; the Fall she goes to sing, maybe, on the stage?"

"It's a shame with money like he's got," his wife put in, "she has a right to stay in the house and look after her father; these girls they forget all their training."

"Tell that to Esther," remarked her husband, caustically; "and see how she will show you mind your own business."

Mrs. Kantar sighed; education had brought its problems, and the overturning of Old World ideas was not the least of them.

Hancock came to bid them goodbye for the Summer after a season the most prosperous he had yet had.

"I'm due for a rest," he said, shaking Leon's hand, "and it's going to be in little old Kansas, where I was brought up. I'm going to stick to the old farmhouse, and, oh, boy, that swimmin' hole."

"It's an awful lot we pay him," Abrahm shook his head as the manager departed. "He's born with a luck spoon, that feller."

Leon smiled; his father's antipathy to paying money for the endless details that confront a manager always amused him.

Hancock's going started a wave of discussion. "I don't see what he can find in a farmhouse in Kansas," said Esther, scornfully.

"You should like a big Summer hotel with dances through the dinner," her father scoffed.

The Skeleton at the Feast

"She wants some life," he undegraduate brother asserted with all the authority of youth.

"Where should a man be the master in his own house any more," Abrahm asked the question hopelessly.

"Oh, well, papa, we might trp the seashore by Maine, maybe," Mrs. Kantor suggested.

There was something almost idyllic in the unfailing good nature of this woman of the masses; who else but a mother of her kind would have cared for the mindless lad who sat like a skeleton at the feast through these days, a constant reminder of the cruelty of Princes.

Everywhere the family went he went, too—he had become so much of a habit that the other people would have missed him.

The younger looked at him with pity, but they had their own cases. Youth is proverbially thoughtless.

Probably in the course of time the question of the defective brother's presence would have become a problem. To his mother he seemed not what he was, but what he might have been; to the children he was a living death, all only a strong sense of filial obedience prevented the voicing of this feeling.

Wherever the Kantors went he went, too. He was with them when the plans for the Summer were agreed upon and when they departed for Mt. Desert to what Esther called a duck of a cottage.

The world is a cynical place and at that fashionable resort the younger people found they were not accepted on the faith of their brother's genius. Leon was welcome when it came to playing the violin for charities, but the welcome was for him alone.

Esther and her college-bred brother did not find themselves basking in the light of social favor. They resented it without trying to reason why, particularly as Leon seemed to be persona grata without effort.

Only One Meaning

But with the coming of August there were other things to think about more important than the petty worries that whirl about social recognition. The news that war had been declared stirred the souls of all classes, but none more than the father and mother of the Kantors who rejoiced to think what they had escaped.

Russian mobilization under the lash of the autocracy would have meant the sacrificing of all their sons. They looked at each other with a new understanding of the meaning of freedom.

To Leon the word came with only one meaning—Gina was in Vienna—how would she get away? The papers began to print graphic accounts of the rush of Americans to get back. The tourist season was at its height and thousands had been caught unprepared.

His fell nervous and suddenly began to realise how much he had been thinking of this girl, now that possible danger confronted her.

"You look worried, Leon!" His mother sensed the fear that lay at the root of his heart.

"All those people I've been reading about," he answered, "trying to get away—the rush and the anxiety."

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

MY tea and toast devoured with gusto, I proceeded around to the hall for my lesson.

"Afternoon, Mrs. Harrison," said the nice lad who was my instructor. "How'd you like a road lesson today? You're doin' so fine, you're ready for it if you say the word."

"Where'll I take you?" he asked.

"How would it be for you to take me down to call for Mr. Harrison?"

"I'm game," said the boy. "And, if you like, I'll wait and drive you both home."

"How nice !" I cried, giving him Jim's address.

Agnow from my own inspiration and the boy's kindness, I stepped into the elevator and gave the number of my floor. This was the first time I had ever called for Jim. It seemed like an adventure.

I paused for a moment to gaze proudly on the name, "J. H. Harrison," which occupied the door in lordly state. Then I sailed in with the happy sense of belonging.

The office was deserted. The cool aloofness of the desks didn't offer me a welcome. The very wastebaskets yawned as if I were a tiresome intruder.

"Of course—it's after six," I explained to my chagrined self.

Then automatically I pushed open the door to Jim's private office.

Tilted back in his own chair sat Jim. Leaning forward across his big, flat-topped desk was Evvy.

For half a second I stood in the doorway unnoticed.

I became conscious of a lump of lead where my heart ought to be.

"Do I intrude?" I asked in a voice that contrived to keep level and cold, although lmps of jealousy were searing my eyes and clawing at my nerves.

Evvy's eyes tore themselves from Jim's face and found me. I had a brief impression of a smile trembling at the corners of her lips, then there came the quick escape of Jim's chair and he came toward me. His face was very grave. His eyes searched mine.

"You never intrude, Anne," he said quietly.

In that moment I forgot Evvy—dismissed her. This was between Jim and me. Petty thoughts were in the outer corridors of my mind, knocking for admission. Neal had just left for home. Jim had made a point of asking me what I'd been doing this afternoon, and had been mildly accounted for by my automobile lesson.

Something Bigger

Before those thoughts could formulate themselves, something bigger came to conquer them—to push them out of my mind. It was my love for Jim and the faith which was founded on the part of that love. In a moment of revelation I knew I believed in Jim's loyalty—that even if I didn't understand him, I trusted him. However this situation looked, I knew it was all right. I knew it.

A cautioner might have reason to stay with the head of the concern after the office force had left. An old friend might conceivably come to consult Jim after business hours. To make it concrete, Evvy Mason—oh, Evvy Mason might do anything! But, as far as Jim was concerned, I loved him and believed in him, and I was "too modern" to be alarmed by a situation in a harmless visit to a man's office.

All this flashed through my mind in a brief moment. But I think some of it went into the handclasp I gave him before I spoke again.

All this flashed through my mind in a brief moment. But I think some of it went into the handclasp I gave him before I spoke again.

"I was out for my first road lesson in the car and stopped by to drive you home. If you and Evvy have finished"——

Jim's eyes looked approval, even as Evvy broke in with a husky little laught to emphasize her words.

"Oh, we had finished. It was just a little matter of investments I wanted to consult my oldest friend about. You're sure you don't mind, Anne?"

I think I meant the laugh with which I replied:

"Mind! What mereseary, modern city wife mindsthe old friend turn into a new client? You know, Evvy, unfortunately, doctors and lawyers and brokers can't always count on having their friends for customers. There's room for four in the car. So you two come along and take the little rumble seat, and finish the business discussion there while I give my attention to 'giving her gas' and 'handling the clutch,' and such like trifles, of which my instructor still knows more than I."

Said Nothing

"Oh" replied Evvy, and then added with a mental gasp I could almost hear, "Do you know Neal's gone away for a week?"

"That's nice. You'll be lonesome. Will you come home to dinner with us? We might get in a fourth this evening and give you folks the opportunity of martyrizing yourselves by teaching me bridge."

"Are you sure you want me?" began Evvy, with a flash of her eyes from me to Jim.

He still said nothing. I could see that Evvy was recovering, and was beginning to take a mischievous delight in what she considered his lack of ease. I knew Jim wasn't in the least ill at ease—knew it with absolute certainty, and felt that he was gallantly leaving the situation (if indeed there was a "situation") to me, and watching me with admiration and approval. For the first time since I had known her, and long before I'd learned to fear her sarafches, I was enjoying Evvy's game—and my part in it.

EDITH

EDITH has a charming augury. Her name means happiness in the Anglo-Saxon, as it is believed to be derived from the "ead." Withal, it is a perplexing name to follow in its various interpretation. It has the same root as Edward, Edwin and Edgar, and curiously enough, Edith appears early in its history as the contraction of Eadgitha, which seems to have been the earliest authentic name.

If we accept Eadgitha as being the forerunner of Edith, then its interpretation is somewhat different, as the emphasis is placed upon the "githa," which is thought to be a phonetic variation of gifa or gifu, meaning gift. In that case, Edith means rich gift.

Gyda was a popular feminine name among the Norse, and Gyitha was the daughter of Swend, King of Denmark. Gydis was a Norse goddess and became the old exalted conception of womanhood.

The first Eadgyth was the daughter of Earl Godwin, of whom Ingulf said: "Sicut spina rosam, genuit Godwinus Egitham." But in the roll of her land in "Domesday," she is called Eddeya. Eddid and Edeva were much used by the Normans, but the queen of Henry I., who bore the name, was not permitted anything so Saxon, and she became Edith.

The Pope's mother was one illustrious Edith; it was also the name of Southey's wife. Scott gave it to the Maid of Lorn and made it likewise the name of the heroine of old Mortality. It is now a reigning favorite in England and America.

The jewel assigned to Edith is the agate, which promises popularity and persuasiveness for its wearer. Its prophecy is best revealed in some very ancient poet's rhyme to the wearer of the agate:

"Adorned with this, thou woman's heart shall attain,
And by persuasion, thy desire attain.
And if of men thou aught demand, shall come,
With all thy wish fulfilled, rejoicing home."

This obliging stone further promises courage and a bold heart in times of danger; to dream of it signifies a journey. Edith's flower is the wild rose. Her lucky day is Friday, and four is said to be her talismanic number.

Elderly People Have A Daily Health Problem

Stomach muscles and digestive organs slow to act as age advances

MOST people find the years slipping by without realizing it, until suddenly confronted with the fact that they can no longer digest everything they would like to eat. It then becomes their daily task to avoid what they know to be chronic constipation.

When exercise and light diet fail it will be necessary to resort to artificial means. Strong physics and cathartics, however, are not advisable for elderly people. They act too powerfully and a feeling of weakness results.

What is needed is a laxative containing effective but mild properties. This is best found in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin which is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. It acts gently and without griping, and used a few days will train the digestive organs to do their work naturally again without other aid.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market since 1892 and was the private formula of Dr. W. B. Caldwell, who is himself past 80 years of age and still active in his profession. It can be bought at any drug store and one bottle is enough for the last word a large family many months. It is a trustworthy preparation.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there being over 6 million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 211 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

Don't be embarrassed by disfiguring blemishes.

If you are unable to really enjoy the society of others because of the fear that that wretched skin eruption on your shoulder will begin to itch, or that your scarf will slip and expose the disfiguring rash you had tried so hard to conceal, try Resinol Ointment.

There is no need of enduring such discomfort when Resinol Ointment usually relieves itching promptly and makes the skin clear and healthy again. When aided by Resinol Soap it is even more effective.

RESINOL SHAVING STICK ends to prevent irritation. All dealers sell the Resinol products.

RINGGOLD, GEORGIA, MAN WRITES

A thankful letter about the benefits received from using Sulpherb Tablets. Its effects are like grandmother's remedy of sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses. But this consists of sulphur, cream of tartar and herbs, in a sugar-coated tablet, easy and pleasant to use, for bad blood, stomach, liver and bowel disorders.

Mr. John M. Plemons, Ringgold, Georgia, writes: "I had an awful bad case of stomach trouble and constipation, and had the service of a specialist with only temporary relief. I saw an advertisement of Sulphur Tablets and began using them, and in a short time noted very good results, and I further used them, and at this time am perfectly well as far as I can tell. I don't recommend anything unless I receive some good results. Some friends use them and they also note good results, etc." Druggists sell Sulpherb Tablets everywhere. Don't take ordinary "sulphur" tablets and be disappointed.

BIGHEART LED IN BOSTON

Market Firm at the Opening and Afterwards; Curb Oils Sell Higher

Strength permeated the Boston exchange list at the opening of business and the firm tone was maintained during the morning. Bigheart was the feature at the beginning. It had a very narrow fluctuation on considerable turnover. Coppers were given a little more support, but remained inactive as a class. United Fruit dropped two points on the first sale. Elder, Ohio Body, Root & Van Dervoort and Gray & Davis were more in evidence than for several days. The price range was narrow and trading of fair volume.

Gains of from one to two points were made during the forenoon by Amoskeag, Mohawk, Osceola, Boston Elevated, Fairbanks and Walworth, while Allouez, East Butte, North Butte, Seneca, United Shoe, Carson Hill, Elder, American Oil, Wickwire, Ohio Body, Gray & Davis and Bigheart showed up fractionally.

Issues to recede more than a point were American Woolen preferred and Waltham. Small losses were shown by Mayflower-Old Colony, National Leather, International Products, Waldorf and New River preferred.

Stocks to sell ex-dividend were West End and American Agricultural Chemical common and preferred.

CURB MARKET STARTS DULL.

The Curb market was quite dull at the start and had little of interest to present during the morning. Manhattan was the most active issue in early trading, but showed small price variation. Directors of the United Verde Extension Mining Co. have declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, the same amount as was authorized three months ago. Dividend will be made on May 1 to stock of record April 5. Strongest stocks at the start included Simms Petroleum, White Oil, Mutual, Imperial, Crystal and Tip Top. Among weak ones were Black Hawk, Alvarado (new), Gilliland, Pilgrim and Universal Silver.

At the end of an hour Simms was up ¾, at 24. White 1-16, at 29. Atlas Tack ⅛, at 35¾. Universal Silver 1 cent at 19 cents, and Arizona Extension 1 cent at 13 cents.

Among declines were Pilgrim 6 cents at 3 cents, Hecla Divide 1 cents at 4 cents, Eureka 1-16 at 1⅝, and Gilliland ⅜ at 45½.

Baker and Trowbridge are well known textile traveling salesmen in the textile soap business in New England.

In commenting upon the stock market outlook Elmer H. Bright says: "There is undoubtedly increasing production; a sound financial basis and a broadening demand to give an honest day's work mind is required sometimes will overcome certain lapses of general prosperity. In the meantime, the general investment market is a broad one, stocks so eagerly plus the speculative possibilities of industrial issues, are particularly likely to find a check through widespread profit taking."

Largest Hotel in the World

According to what is stated in New York newspapers, the Hotel Commonwealth Construction Corporation of Boston will build on the New York boundary by Broadway, Seventh avenue, Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth streets the largest hotel in the world. The hotel plans call for a twenty-eight-story structure containing 2,500 rooms. Henry L. Merry, identified with the McAlpin and Claridge hotels, will operate the Commonwealth, which is to be run on a co-operative basis. The plans for the structure have been designed by Starrett & Van Vleck and King Campbell.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, March 22.—The cotton market opened quietly at a decline of 12 points to an advance of 8 points. Despite weak cables, further liquidation in foreign exchange and improved weather in the belt, offerings were light. Trade and commission house buying absorbed prices. May rose to 37.50 and October to 32.35, a net gain of 4 to 8 points respectively. Wall Street traded both ways. Dealers in the local position were also active, with prices held around 40.44, or 9 points above Saturday's close. Opening prices were: March, 40.44; April, 39.60; May, 37.75; September, 32.90; October, 32.30; November, 31.27; January, 30.94; February, 30.83.

Monomet Spinning Company declared quarterly dividend of $2 per share and a special dividend of $2 per share, both payable April 1 to holders of record March 15. Rexicraft Picture Corporation declared 2 per cent. quarterly dividend on preferred Series A, payable April 1.

RECORD HIGHS BY MOTORS

Profit Taking Reduced Big Gains in Brisk Morning Trading

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks were still strong, as a rule, in New York at noon, but prices were considerably below the morning highest. Profit taking wiped out all gains for some and reduced the advances of others. After showing twenty-nine points gain, General Motors reacted to seventeen points net. Studebaker showed four points loss after eight points gain. Crucible was the strongest stock at the end of the morning, being up more than twelve points. U. S. Steel was off a fraction. The market was very active, first hour transactions totalling around 440,000 shares. Call money renewed at 7 per cent.

Demand sterling opened 3 cents lower at $4.75¼, while francs opened at 12.97, lire at 19.20 and marks at 0.215.

HIGHER PRICES AT OPENING.

The week began with stocks rising the market being strong at the outset and with motors the key. Studebaker and Chandler sold at record highs on initial transactions and General Motors opened with fifteen points gain and then sold at 609, its record highest. Its profits during the morning points before its advance was checked, but realization sales soon reduced the gain of this and other issues. The market remained strong and active during the first hour, however. Oils came next after motors in regard to price improvement while steel and shipping shares were next in order. Texas & Pacific led the rails which, like coppers, were quiet and steady. Baldwin was the only equipment to make much of a showing in early trading. It suffered in the slight reaction. Crucible was foremost among steels, while Atlantic Gulf was prominent among shipping issues. Mexican Oil reached first among oils in the forward movement. Trading was largely confined to motors, steels and oils up to midmorning.

BAD MORNING FOR BEARS.

It was a bad morning for bears. The market gave no heed to the fate of the Peace Treaty, to dire reports from Germany, or to the unfavorable bank statement of Saturday. Despite the deficit in reserve and a decrease in the whole country's clearings last month, sentiment was cheerful. It is understood that the credit situation is much improved, one statement from New York being that commercial loans have been liquidated to an extent not appreciated. Brokers' loans aggregate a billion dollars, a very large figure, the figures of last Summer. The decrease in the reserves of the New York Clearing House banks was not considered a serious matter, being due to the collection of income tax checks through clearings and the consequent reduction of balances at the Federal Reserve Bank to the extent of $33,-850,000.

Measures That Would Cure Most of the Troubles and Tendencies Which Distress and Alarm Us Today

(1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
(2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
(3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put public offices as nearly as possible under Civil Service, and have appointments made by a committee of Congress.
(4) To elect Federal Judges, including Supreme Court Justices, by popular vote.
(5) To apply the Initiative, the Referendum and the Recall to national matters.

The American Legion Should Demand Soldiers' Bonus

Today the State department commanders of the American Legion will meet to confer on the question of compensation for our soldiers, sailors and marines.

The Legion has assumed a strange diffidence at asking for perfectly plain justice to the soldiers. At the last national convention the Legion probably erred in not deciding upon the extra compensation which they considered just and in not making a flat declaration for it. But since their officials have now delegated authority to do the same thing, they ought to do it immediately.

Of course, it is nicer to allow others to sing your praises and voluntarily to reward your merits, but this is a selfish and negligent world and the American people are a hurrying, negligent people. They mean well and they will do well if somebody leads the way. But if no one will lead the way except the Legion, then the Legion ought to lead it.

It ought to make it perfectly clear to Congress that a substantial and definite compensation is demanded by the soldiers, and they ought not to be ashamed to demand it and they ought not to be apologetic about it.

Long ago the Hearst newspapers advocated a reward of not less than six months' pay to the soldiers, and more than six million American people gladly signed petitions to that effect. There never was the slightest indication that those to whom the Hearst papers addressed their appeal doubted the propriety of a substantial extra compensation.

Indeed, the justice of extra compensation is so plain and the injustice of denying it so gross that discussion of the question becomes difficult. We asked these young men to leave their business and go into the government service for $30 a month. We asked them to leave pleasant, comfortable homes for the discomforts and hardships of a soldier's life. And then we asked them—the crowning sacrifice of all—to risk their lives and limbs in the country's service, all for $30 a month.

The Constitution of the United States provides that property shall not be taken without just compensation. If it were a question of property, the amount that was lost by these young men in wages alone would probably greatly exceed the entire extra compensation which the soldiers ask.

Yet if we take a man's property for the public service we are obliged to pay for it exactly what the loss we cause him is.

But we not only took his property in this case, for the value of his earning power is property, but we took his body and exposed it to discomforts and hardships. That, too, would be a demand for which in civil life we would have to compensate the citizen.

And then we exposed him to danger to his life. That, also, would be subject to compensation under ordinary rules of damages.

Looking at it from whatever point of view you may, without considering sentiment at all, the case for extra compensation and for substantial compensation is absolutely clear in equity.

But what a pity it is that we have to argue the question as we would the taking of a piece of land for a park or for a railroad. We hear members of Congress talking about the cost of the compensation as if they meant that it would cost the nation the whole amount to be paid to the soldiers. Of course, it will cost nothing of the sort. The money is not destroyed. It is largely a question of distribution. It will be taken from the earnings of some and added to the earnings of others.

This setting up of considerations of economy against the soldiers' bonus is a disgusting, cold-blooded piece of ingratitude. While the soldiers were giving up good incomes and shedding their blood, those at home were prospering as never before. Now we talk about economy in the face of the soldiers' demand. We are "weighing so many pieces of silver against so many ounces of blood."

It is time the Legion made known its attitude on the bonus question. Call it "bonus" or "additional compensation" or "readjustment of pay" or "extra pay" or whatever you please. But let the Legion throw off the hesitation which has given courage to the false economists and let them make their demand in a way that leaves no doubt that they mean business.

South Dakota's Primary Will Be Instructive

The presidential primary in South Dakota tomorrow will be the first full test of Republican mass sentiment on the candidacies now conspicuous. Senators Johnson and Poindexter, Governor Lowden and General Wood have spoken in many parts of that State. Each has exhibited his intellectual wares and been seen and sized up.

South Dakota in character of population well types the Northwest and has many of the characteristics of the Middle West. It is not so advanced in its liberalism as North Dakota, but it is not reactionary. It has town and city industries as well as farms. Its people are well read and ought to know the kind of President and presidential policies they prefer.

Much may happen between March and June. Much probably will happen to change existing preferences, for public opinion as it affects personalities is still quite fluid. But the candidate who wins a substantial plurality in this general poll may fairly lay claim to genuine popular strength. He will gain a distinct advantage over rivals.

Alone among the competitors who have spoken there Hiram Johnson has stood for straight, progressive Americanism, with all courage and freedom.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Practical Patriot

By S. E. KISER

In Brooklyn certain landlords insist that tenants to whom babies are born must pay more rent or move.

"MY country first of all," he said; "my country, right or wrong;
The flag that waves above my head—I'm for it, sure and strong!
I love my country's rocks and rills, I love it day and night;
I love its valleys and its hills, they fill me with delight.
I'm patriotic to the core—confound the taxes, though!
Each year I'm troubled more and more to keep my payments low.

"LET'S banish all the fools who try to bring reforms about;
They don't know what they want, so why not have them driven out?
This country's good enough for me, just as it is today;
I'm loyal, and will always be, for I was born that way.
I'm sick of all this discontent—let well enough alone—
Excuse me while I raise the rent on all the flats I own.

"WITH patriotic zeal I burn; I'm loyal through and through—
I wonder if those spies will learn? I wish to God I knew!
Excuse me now, I've got to go and turn some fools away;
They've had a baby, which, you know, upsets the rules—hooray!
Another chance to raise the rent—my country, 'tis of thee!
Why should there still be discontent where all is fair and free?"

IN A little shack.
THAT IS very old.
AND LOOKS out of its door.
TO MOUNDS of earth.
WHERE THE miner worked.
IN HIS search for gold.
IN '49.
AND I VERY year.
WHEN THE Fall days come.
SO CHARLIE comes.
TO HIS little shack.
AND HIS Winter job.
ON THE nearby ranch.
AND EVERY year.
FOR FIVE years past.
THE BIG black cat.
I'VE SPOKEN of.
COMES WANDERING back.
AND SO you'll know.
WHO CHARLIE is.
I'LL SIMPLY tell.
HE WANDERS much.
WHERE MEN are hard.
AND TOIL is hard.
AND KNOWS no roof.
EXCEPT THE sky.
AND SO it was.
FIVE YEARS ago.
HE WANDERED here.
AND FOUND the shack.
AND FOUND the job.

AND EAT their fill.
THEY'RE JUST good friends.
AND NEITHER asks.
WHERE THE other goes.
WHEN SPRING time comes.

ENGROSSING NEW WORK ON SPIRIT WORLD

"A Cloud of Witnesses," by Mrs. Anna de Koven, widow of the American composer, is a record of personal experience of what she believes to be authentic communications.

DO the departed return? Do they progress in a future state? World-old questions, to which there are as many answers as there are different creeds and religions. In the widespread revival of interest in these matters, a consequence of the war, they are being asked anew and answered in a new way.

One of the latest contributions to the serious literature of this subject is a new book by Anna De Koven, widow of the American composer, entitled, "A Cloud of Witnesses" (E. P. Dutton & Co.). In it Mrs. De Koven has framed a record of personal experience, the truthfulness, sincerity and lofty purpose of which none can question.

With Her Sister

It is the record of what the author believes to be authentic communications with a beloved sister, between whom and the author an unusually tender affection and strong sympathy existed during this life.

The communications recorded took place through a Mrs. Vernon of New York, a remarkable psychic, who accepted no remuneration for her services and rendered them only for research or to allay the grief of those bereaved. The experience of Mrs. De Koven at her first visit was so striking as to convince the seeker at once and beyond all shadow of doubt that she was actually in communication with her sister "beyond the veil." The medium, knowing at that first visit nothing of her visitor, the family, or the sister's death, described a piece of patchwork and a jeweled brooch which the departed wished her sister to have, and also conveyed anxiety over the health of someone who was threatened.

Mrs. De Koven learned later that her sister had begun a table cover of lace and linen, and recognized the brooch in question. She also learned that her husband had been contemplating electric treatment for an ailment, which was later applied and very nearly proved fatal.

With this convincing testimony to start with, deep significance is attached by the author to later manifestations. A chapter is devoted to an account of Mrs. Vernon, of whom the author learned indirectly through Dr. Elwood Worcester of Emmanuel Church, Boston. This lady is not a "psychic" in the ordinary sense of that term. She does not go into trances; she never loses consciousness of herself, her companions or her surroundings.

Made Unhappy

The messages proceed to convey an idea of the life of the spirit, which, according to the "communicator," receives instruction and progresses. The spirit inhabits an immaterial world, which yet takes on material forms at the will of the individual soul. This soul may visualize a flowery landscape, a beautiful home; it may take on its earthly form and invest others with a semblance of material forms.

The soul is made unhappy by the unhappiness of loved ones left behind. It is to be noted that none of the answers to questions put by the earthly sitter are either in direct affirmative or negative. Nor are they as a rule addressed to the questioner, but to the medium. One message, perhaps more, was received via the ouija board, and the sister-communicator encouraged its use, but apparently found Mrs. Vernon a more efficacious means of communication.

There are messages from other personalities, many of them well-known in the world of psychical research. An introductory chapter is devoted to psychic phenomena of other sorts. There is a preface by Dr. James Lyslop, the renowned scientific investigator. Altogether an engrossing book, to be reckoned with in the rapidly growing literature on this subject.

"One Might Almost Say" Corporation "Hand-Out" When Horses Leave, Beware

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920.

Lady Astor, sent from America to be the first woman in the House of Commons, says: "The seas one might almost say belong to England, and could not be in any better or safer hands. I don't believe the United States ever will ever build against England. It would be very stupid if it did."

Women are adaptable and go with the tribe that captures them today as in ancient times. However, the United States will build. And certain parts of the seas, certainly those joining United States coasts east and west, "one might almost say," will be controlled by the United States.

The General Chemical Company distributes a "stock dividend" worth $3,307,340. These are figures from the New York Times, which serves organized finance. The Times says: "A hint of stock dividends was contained in an announcement last November. It had been decided to postpone action on an extra dividend in view of the pending decisions of the Supreme Court on the status of stock dividends."

What does that mean to you? It means that this company held up a dividend on which the government could collect income tax because, like hundreds of other corporations, it was waiting for the Supreme Court to make it possible for the very prosperous to escape income tax.

Business men, big and little, and salary earners will have the pleasure for years to come of paying more because the Supreme Court has made it possible for corporations and their enormously rich stockholders to dodge.

It is the business of Congress and the people, by Constitutional amendment if necessary, to let the "narrow margin majority" of the Supreme Court know the public opinion of that recent decision.

The peace treaty lies dead. Recently buried in President Wilson's pocket. From the death and funeral may come an interesting fight next November and, sooner, at San Francisco.

Lodge dares Wilson to make the treaty an issue in the campaign. Mr. Wilson doesn't "take a dare," as little boys say. If he is well enough they will find him making the peace league fight through a third term candidacy. A fight of that sort is one of the things you "can't have done" or hand to another.

Judge Kavanaugh in Chicago tells Patrick King, naturalized, he must abjure allegiance to "the Republic of Ireland and Eamon De Valera, its President." Patrick King consented, because it was the first judicial recognition of the Irish Republic. Judge Kavanaugh is correct in his statement that Ireland's people recognize the republic, although foreign nations do not. That was the condition of the United States from 1776 to 1783.

Berlin reports an outbreak of the anti-Jewish mob spirit that travels with violence and ignorance. It appears to have been stimulated by Baltic troops. As they were leaving Berlin these troops fired rifles and machine guns through the streets, killing many. That should enlighten Berlin concerning the character of anti-Semitism. "Kill Jews if you can, kill somebody, anyhow."

If horses, tractors and other necessary machinery were leaving his farm, no new supplies in sight, the farmer would call that bad farm news. Bad news for the big U. S. A. farm is the constant departure of necessary workers, thousands in a day.

Eleven thousand have applied for passports in the last two weeks. They are not coming back and few come to replace them. Passports for workers formerly averaged seven hundred a week. Now they average five thousand a week and more.

Five thousand pairs of useful arms and legs per week is a big loss to this American farm, more important than tax-dodging, profiteering or lack of hard work among some of the native-born proud Americans.

There is in England a fight for control more important and bitter than the fight between Junkers and Social Democrats in Germany. England's workingmen, allied with the Socialist party, are fighting for control against the rest of the nation, middle class and upper class.

Winston Churchill, descendant of an American stock broker and of Marlborough, the English fighter, calls the Socialist party "the most dark, formidable menace with which British civilization is confronted." What he says is not important. He was brought up to exaggerate the value of his ideas.

But even Lloyd George, who has handled every problem, from the British Tory to the German Kaiser, now finds British labor in politics too much for him, and advises coalition of Liberals and Unionists against labor radicalism. It is a fight as important as the clash between privilege and misery in the French revolution. It is more peaceful at present, but may not remain so.
